Turkey Day

Washingtonians today prepared to sit down to their second wartime Thanksgiving dinner, their traditional celebrations modified by leaner fare, absent servicemen and women and on-the-job orders.

Government workers will have no holiday, though other offices will be closed in commemoration of the Pilgrims' first harvest in 1621.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones yesterday commented:

"On Thanksgiving it is customary for Americans to give thanks for our blessings, but especially for the food that is on our tables. This year, too, we shall give thanks for food. And though we shall refrain from wasteful feasts, our thankfulness is multiplied.

"First of all we give thanks that we have enough before us to eat—a boon enjoyed by few peoples who share the earth with us today.

"Liberators, Not Looters"

"Moreover, we give thanks that we can feed an army of millions that is driving our enemy, the destroyer of all good things, from our doors.

"Finally, I think we should thank the Creator with particular humility for the possession that makes our armies liberators, not looters."

Many servicemen from nearby posts have been granted leave to celebrate in the Capital at USO dinners and parties, while hundreds of others began crowding Washington-bound trains and buses yesterday to join their families here.

Officials at the Washington Terminal and local bus stations indicated that traffic, both incoming and outgoing, was heavy, but with little increase over weekend loads. The Pennsylvania Railroad was

Price of Canol Plane Gas Put At $2.76 a Gal.

Sen. Truman Terms Entire Canada Oil Project Indefensible

By Mary Spargo

Aviation gasoline to be produced at the Army's Canol project in northwest Canada will cost at least $2.76 a gallon, according to estimates based on figures released yesterday by the Truman Committee, whose chairman, Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, terms the whole deal "indefensible from any standpoint."

At the same time Hugh Fulton, committee counsel, released other figures to show that even after the Canol refinery is in operation in the spring of 1944, it will take between five and six years to produce as many barrels of aviation gasoline as could have been shipped to that area for exactly the same tonnage as the Canol project has required in materials, supplies and equipment.

On the West Coast, 100 octane gasoline in tanker lots sells for 14½ cents a gallon, committee officials pointed out, while 91 octane gasoline sells for 8¾ cents a gallon.

Based on Initial Cost

Estimates that United States taxpayers will spend at least $2.76 a gallon for Canol aviation gasoline are based on the initial cost of 100 million dollars which the Army has put into sinking wells, building a refinery with a daily capacity of 479 barrels of gasoline, and connecting pipeline, amortized over a period of five years.

Added to that sum is $1.25 a barrel which the United States is paying Canada's Imperial Oil Co. for oil from the Canadian property on which the American investment is made.

Committee members claim that the whole 100 million dollars can be written off, since the United States has no postwar rights in its Canadian investment. According to present arrangements, the Government can sell after the war either to the Imperial Oil Co. or to the Canadian Government the equipment it has placed in the northwest territory. Senator Truman holds that the value after the war will be negligible.

Not included in the estimate of $2.76 a gallon is the cost of maintenance and operation of the re-

House Passes Own Tax Bill By 200-27

Measure Carries 20% of Revenue Treasury Seeks; 2d Major Defeat

By Samuel W. Bell
New York Herald-Tribune Bureau

Operating under an effective "gag" procedure, the House passed yesterday the $2,140,000,000 tax bill in the exact form reported by its Ways and Means Committee after it had been more than two and one-half months in the making. The passage came on a standing vote counted as 200 to 27.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, is expected to appear Monday before the Finance Committee, presumably to renew the Roosevelt Administration's recommendations, rejected by the House, that $10,500,000,000 additional taxes be imposed in 1944, chiefly through drastically increased taxes on personal incomes above the $3000 bracket.

Sales Tax Alternative

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Finance Committee, already has congratulated the House Committee on its action in cutting back the Treasury's recommendations. Further, he has served notice that, if the Administration insists on $10,500,000,000, or any sizeable portion thereof, the Administration must expect the Senators to turn to a sales tax as the only source from which to raise such a total.

The House revolt against substantial increases in individual or corporate income taxes in 1944, as disclosed in the course of the five hours' debate on the bill yesterday, was based on several reasons.

First, it was emphasized that the Treasury has acknowledged that internal tax collections from all sources will aggregate $43,480,000,000 next year if the bill's total is included; second, that the Administration has "exaggerated" the so-called inflationary gap; and, third, that economies in Federal expenditures can more than make up the difference between the Treasury's tax demand and the total of the House bill.

"Recaptures" Debated

Much was made in the debate of the recent promise of the War Department to turn back on July 1, more than $13,000,000,000 appropriated for the current fiscal year, unless some "unforeseen situation" develops. Suggestion also was made that some of the current funds appropriated for the Navy

Coal Price Boosted 62 Cents a Ton

The OPA yesterday boosted prices of hard coal by an average of 62 cents a ton to meet the cost of the wage increases recently authorized for miners. The most commonly used sizes—broken, egg, stove, chestnut and pea, will advance 70 cents a ton under the schedule.

On June 1, 1944, the increase will drop to an average of 32 cents a ton above present prices, after the cost of the retroactive portion of the pay increase has been met.

Congress Calls for Full Story Of Patton Slapping Incident

By Robert C. Albright

Congress yesterday demanded full details of the Sicilian slapping incident, as the Capitol fairly buzzed with pro and con views on the behind-the-lines conduct of "Old Blood and Guts."

From the War Department the Senate Military Affairs Committee asked a complete report on Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s, encounter with a shell-shocked soldier in a Sicilian hospital.

To Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat) of Oklahoma wrote a letter demanding Patton be relieved of his Seventh Army command.

But from both sides of the Capitol came some temperate voices urging Congress not to prejudge the case of a general who has proven he can win battles and whose military record was previously unsullied.

Typical of the cooler view was a speech on the House floor by Representative Robert A Grant (Republican) of Indiana.

Said Grant: "Let the Army handle its own problems, and let's get on with winning the war."

More frequently, House debate was broken by bitter attacks on the general and demands for a full-dress congressional investigation.

It was the Senate Military Affairs Committee that made the first move to get the facts. Pending before the committee is Patton's promotion from colonel to the permanent rank of major general. Some members of the committee have broadly hinted that unless the facts are other than they now appear, the general's nomination will never be confirmed.

Chairman Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina told newsmen the committee's call on Secretary of War Stimson for the facts was unanimous. He said the move was suggested by Senators Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado and Styles Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire.

In other committee quarters it was said the War Department is now working on the matter, but does not at the present time have a full report on the incident from its officers in the field.

Reynolds said he agreed with the committee majority that a full Army report should be made, but added:

Slap Heard Around the World

Patton's Wife Offers No Alibi For 'Tough Perfectionist'

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

Mrs. George S. Patton, jr., white-haired wife of the general whose slap has been heard around the world, last night offered no alibi for her husband, but asked that the Nation try to understand him as "a tough perfectionist," and "a man fighting furiously for his country."

Both Mrs. Patton and her daughter, Mrs. J. K. Waters, wife of a Tank Corps colonel captured by the Nazis at Kasserine Pass, agreed that the general "will take any punishment without wincing."

"Dad can eat crow when he has to—better than anyone I know," Mrs. Waters said. "I've never known him to pass the buck or bow out or blame anyone else—when he is at fault."

Tough, hard-riding and bellicose General Patton's big soft spot is service to his country, the family said. He saw "the war coming a long time ago and drove everyone crazy worrying over whether or not he was too old to get in."

Given command of the armored Seventh Division, the Army's most colorful field general was "all tied up, heart and soul, in turning his division into a perfect fighting machine."

His success was amply illustrated during the 39-day Sicilan campaign. Patton personally led his men in battle and "asked nothing of them that he couldn't or would not do himself," Mrs. Patton recalled last night.

"He did a wrong thing—he made a mistake—but perhaps a few people can understand it if they put themselves in his place," his wife said.

The general is "a man who feels deeply," she explained, "and after all those days of seeing his boys blown apart" and then walking down rows of "horribly wounded soldiers—with arms and legs and even faces blown off," the sight of an apparently able-bodied husky man "sitting on a cot in his helmet," probably touched off the dynamite of Patton's personality.

"He has been known to weep at his men's graves—as well as tear their hides off, you know," the family explained.

Mrs. Patton, whose two daughters are married to men in service and whose son, George 3d, is a cadet at West Point, added, thoughtfully, that "a commanding officer—from a shavetail to a general—is the 'father' of his men and sometimes reacts like one when they disapoint him."

"I think I'm a good mother—but I can remember all too well punishing my children in the heat of disappointment or shock and wishing later I hadn't. In fact I would have given my right hand—

And All 'Lose Face'

Panting Colonel Is Berated By 2 Fort Monroe 'Noncoms'

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 24 (AP).—Two Army men, a drill sergeant and a medical corporal at Fort Monroe, are making themselves as inconspicuous as possible these days after an affair Patton in reverse. One of them, the sergeant, bawled out a lieutenant colonel, and the corporal called him too old to be in the Army and added insult to injury by offering him a ride in an ambulance.

The lieutenant colonel, Leon J. Meyung, is a new group commander at the fort. According to a story from the Fort Monroe public relations office, the new officer was to take charge of a practice march and bivouac. Wishing to reach the main line of march before his men did, he donned fatigue clothes, snatched up his rifle, helmet and pocket incidentals and ran to the south gate.

Arriving breathless just as the marching men drew abreast, he noted the drill sergeant's disapproving stare. The sergeant swung out of line and confronted the stray.

"Well," he demanded, "and just what in hell are you waiting for?"

The colonel opened his mouth to tell the man off, then closed it as he realized no sign of his rank showed. He fumbled in his pockets for his silver leaves as the sergeant blasted away again, "Get back to the rear and don't look so offended."

The colonel puffed into line where he found himself beside a sympathetic corporal.

"Aint you kind of old to be goin' through all this?" the corporal queried. The colonel, who had had enough by this time, was about to say who he was when the corporal whacked him on the back, saying, "Aw now Pop, that's awright. If the going gets too tough I'll fix things for ya to ride in the ambulance."

Fifth Craft Hit, But Sixth Flees U. S. Navy Force Near Rabaul

By Murlin Spencer

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Thursday), Nov. 25 (AP). An American destroyer force sank four Japanese destroyers and damaged a fifth during the first hours of Thanksgiving Day in a naval action fought for the first time in waters so close to the enemy's naval and air fortress of Rabaul.

A sixth destroyer alone escaped the Americans, who emerged unscathed.

The battle occurred 90 miles southeast of Rabaul and presumably prevented removal of personnel from Buka, at the northern tip of Bougainville Island.

The Americans were commanded by Capt. Arleigh Burke, of Washington, D. C., whose nickname is "Thirty-Knot." Capt. Burke lived up to the nickname, the spokesman said. His force was slightly smaller than the enemy's.

Intercepting the enemy units off the northwest coast of invaded Bougainville shortly after midnight, the American ships virtually annihilated the Japanese after a thrilling battle which ended with the two surviving enemy destroyers fleeing.

The action was most daring for the Americans, pursuing the enemy to within easy range of Japanese air cover.

It was even more decisive than the first engagement in which 5 of 12 enemy ships were sunk and 4 others damaged.

(Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, in his Pearl Harbor analysis of the New American victory in the mid-Pacific Gilberts, said the blows delivered recently against Rabaul's destroyers and cruisers helped impair Japan's ability to offer a naval counterstroke to the Gilbert invaders.)

The six destroyers were moving either south or southeast (which would be in the general direction of Bougainville) when intercepted in the blackness of the tropical night. This interception was believed to have been accidental, occurring while the American units were patrolling water between New Britain and Bougainville.

On Bougainville, the west-central coast beachhead was extended by three-quarters of a mile. In the air, Mitchells ranged in the same general vicinity where the sea battle opened to drop 44 more tons of explosives on enemy plane bases at Buka, which of late have been pounded both by bombers and warships. Another 52 tons kept inoperative the bypassed enemy airfields on Bougainville's south coast.

Zoo Animals Roam Berlin After Raid

By Edwin Shanke

Stockholm, Nov. 24 (AP).—Walls of flame more than a half mile long were reported licking at Berlin buildings after the second massive air attack in two nights, but travelers said tonight that rain was helping Nazi firemen to keep them from spreading.

Broken water mains, however, still handicapped firefighting efforts in the paralyzed capital.

Animals in the Berlin zoo escaped during Monday night's record attack, a traveler reported, and guards armed with machine guns hunted and shot elephants and bears in Tiergarten Park.

An eyewitness of the raids Monday night and Tuesday night, who arrived here by plane, said the first attack was much worse than last night's, but that the second raid caused more confusion. The air ministry building, personally designed by Adolf Hitler, was reported burned, and not a house was left standing along the Friedrichstrasse.

Yank Conquest Of Gilberts Is Completed

4000 Japanese Defending Betio Cut to Pieces

By Charles H. McMurtry

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 24 (AP).—American invasion forces completed the conquest of the mid-Pacific Gilbert Islands Tuesday with the capture of Betio Island and its strategic airfield after killing most of the 4000 defenders.

Conquest of this key isle in the Tarawa Atoll group came as other United States ground forces hunted down the remnants of Japanese on Makin and Abemama atolls, already firmly in American hands. The Gilberts provide a potential springboard for new amphibious or aerial attacks on Japan's outer island defenses.

A desperate enemy counterattack before noon Tuesday failed to shake the Marines' grip on Betio. The leathernecks of the Second Division broke it up. Then they forged on to take control of the island before nightfall.

On Fourth Day

This fierce action, which placed the last of the three invasion points in the Gilberts in American possession, came on the fourth day of the Central Pacific offensive, the first American campaign in that area.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced the capture of Makin yesterday and the situation on Abemama was said at the time to be such as to assure speedy conquest.

Few prisoners were being taken, Nimitz said today. Some 4000 Japanese were believed slain on Betio alone. There the enemy had concentrated the bulk of his Tarawa forces to defend its air-base facilities.

A fleet spokesman said the Japanese counterattack really speeded

A City Dazed

By Robert N. Sturdevant

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—Berlin was a virtually paralyzed and isolated inferno tonight, with large sections of its center bombed to flaming rubble by the second successive blockbusting night attack by RAF four-engined bombers.

Bombers which coastal observers believed to be of the RAF headed eastward over the Strait of Dover at dusk for the third successive night and the sound of their motors could be heard nearly an hour—even longer than the preceding night when Berlin received its second successive drubbing.

A Stockholm dispatch said rain fell on the stricken city Wednesday afternoon, helping to keep the fires from spreading further, but Berlin firemen were handicapped by a water shortage resulting from breaking of the mains.

The second great raid, hitting the Nazi capital as it still staggered in a daze from the effects of the first, carried to Berliners the war's greatest antimorale offensive and quickly brought threats of "reprisals" from angry Nazi leaders.

As stupefied Berliners still battled fires and dug for their dead and injured in the ruins of the once-proud city, continental radios shut down tonight, an indication that Allied bombers were winging their way over Nazi-held Europe once again.

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—Berlin is now the world's most-bombed city. Approximately 12,000 long tons of bombs have fallen on the German capital this year. Hamburg received approximately 10,000 tons; Essen, Hannover and Cologne about 8000, and Mannheim-Ludwigshafen more than 7000.

The British estimated officially that 7500 long tons were dropped on London from September, 1940, through June, 1941.

Torpedo Victim 'Flies' 200 Feet On Ship Mattress

A cook on a Liberty ship owes his life to a "GI" mattress, the War Shipping Administration said yesterday in reporting the sinking of the SS. Richard D. Spaight.

Second Cook Helmar Schmidt, native of an occupied country, was lying on a mattress on deck of the Spaight when she was struck by a torpedo in Mozambique Channel, between Madasgascar and the African mainland. The blast sent the mattress 200 feet into the air and it landed right side up on the sea with Schmidt still on it.

Another torpedo smashed into the Spaight and the rest of her crew abandoned ship, picking up Schmidt in a small boat.

After three days in lifeboats, the crew came ashore in the African Zululand. The only member missing was messman William J. O'Brien of Philadelphia, who had been sitting beside Schmidt when the first torpedo struck.

Two Sangro River Towns Fall Before Eighth Army's Advance

By Edward Kennedy

Algiers, Nov. 24 (AP).—Stabbing forward over rough terrain through six intervening towns and villages, Eighth Army troops have seized the two Sangro River towns of San Angelo and Alfedena near the center of the Italian line, virtually clearing the approaches to the Germans' main defense system along a 45-mile stretch to the Adriatic Sea.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's fighters plunged 10 miles due west from Castiglione to capture San Angelo on the east bank of the Sangro after routing the enemy from Capracotta, Castel Del Giudice, Cianni and Martano, a headquarters announcement said today. San Angelo, whose full name is San Angelo Del Pesco, is 28 miles inland from the Adriatic.

In a final advance into the burning town of Alfedena, fired by the Nazis two days previously, the Eighth blasted its way through the stoutly defended villages of Montenero Val Coccinara and Bocca. Alfedena, 45 miles from the eastern end of the battle line, is on the very backbone of Italy, near the sources of the Sangro and Volturno Rivers, which flow in opposite directions.

Although the Germans still held difficult heights east of the Sangro between San Angelo and Alfedena, the two wedges, driven to the stream by Montgomery's troops guaranteed that the enemy soon would be forced back across the Sangro along its entire length. Only then would the Allies be in position for a major assault against the Nazis' winter line from

Capital Liquor Situation One Of Worst, Van Nuys Charges

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana, chairman of the Senate Liquor Investigation subcommittee, blasted at the liquor marketing situation in Washington yesterday, describing it as "one of the worst spots in the Nation."

"There are more tie-in sales, more hoarding of liquor, more partiality in its sale, and in my opinion more violations of ceiling prices in Washington than in any other city in the country," he declared, "and I've heard from most of them.

Adding pointedly that the D. C. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board had made no attempts to assist the Senate subcommittee, Van Nuys said that it "irks the committee a little that this local board doesn't seem a bit interested in ferreting out what's wrong."

Reached for comment on the charges last night, Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the ABC Board, asserted that his group is "at the service of the committee at all times. We would be delighted to cooperate," he said, refusing, however, to say anything further on the Senator's criticism of the Washington situation.

According to Van Nuys, the Senate subcommittee also will investigate a possible relationship between a reported bottle shortage and the current whisky drought.

"It is generally claimed that the bottle shortage is directly responsible for part of the present liquor shortage," he said. "I understand that bottlers now are permitted to buy only 65 per cent of the previous quotas. We are going into the matter thoroughly."

Meanwhile, plans have been made by the ABC for a meeting tomorrow morning at 9:30 with a committee from the District Retail Liquor Dealers Association. The

Nazi Counterdrive On Kiev Cracked

Clever Ruse

Yankee Trap Bags 12 of 18 Nazi Raiders

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Nov. 23 (Delayed) (AP).—A trap set for the Nazi air force by an American officer was sprung today and it caught at least two-thirds of a force of German fighter-bombers that attempted to raid a fuel dump just north of Naples.

Antiaircraft gunners claimed 12 kills out of 18 raiding planes.

The fuel dump was first attacked last Saturday, and minor damage was done, but no casualties resulted. American officers investigated the attack on the possibility that information about the location of the dump might have been passed through the lines by German spies.

Maj. Max Papurt, Cleveland, Ohio, said he was satisfied the position had been spotted by German reconnaissance and not by spies. He suggested a trap.

A German reconnaissance plane flew over yesterday. The pictures the pilot undoubtedly took showed no antiaircraft there—because it had been removed. But as soon as the enemy plane was out of sight a heavy concentration of light and medium ack-ack guns was moved into concealed positions around the dump.

This morning planes came, bent on finishing the job they had done Saturday.

American and British gunners held their fire until the German pilots were going into their bombing and strafing runs. Then they opened up, first with the light guns which drove the raiders to a higher level. At that height a crossfire of heavy shells was waiting for them.

"The boys had a field day," said Major Papurt.

Reds Also Improve Positions on Eleventh Day of Fighting

London (Thursday) Nov. 25 (AP). Russia's Ukrainian army rallied to crack the furious German counterattack in the Kiev sector on the eleventh day yesterday in bitter defensive fighting which improved Soviet positions in the Chernyakhov and Brusilov sectors.

"All attempts of the Germans to penetrate our defenses met with failures," the Russians announced today in their first communique to suggest that the German onslaught had reached its highwater mark.

Meanwhile the German-inspired Vichy radio, in the first mention of Leningrad for many weeks, said Russia's second city had been bombarded by German heavy artillery, perhaps indicating the Germans might move in this long, quiet area. Germans were last reported close to the city on the west and south.

Since German Field Marshal Fritz von Mannstein began the most important Nazi counterattack in four months in the Ukraine, the Russians have admitted the loss of Zhitomir, an important rail junction 80 miles west of Kiev. They also have conceded the loss of some populated places in the Chernyakhov, Korostyshev and Brusilov sectors of their westernmost salient.

Brusilov is 45 miles west of Kiev and Chernyakhov, 13 miles north of Zhitomir. Korostyshev is between Zhitomir and Brusilov, on the southern flank of the Kiev bulge.

The German radio earlier broadcast an unverified report that Brusilov and Chernyakhov had been captured by the Germans but the Moscow midnight communique, recorded here by the Soviet radio monitor, indicated the tide had turned.

The Russians reported a total of 5500 Germans killed and 62 tanks destroyed in the day's fighting from north of Gomel south to the Dnieper bend.

North of Gomel the Germans made an unsuccessful counter attack aimed at wresting back fortified positioins captured by the Russians in a fierce battle.

In the nearby Rechitsa area, west of Gomel, a water barrier was forced by Red Army mobile units which sprang upon several German strongholds.

Khoiniki, a district center 30 miles southeast of the strategic rail junction of Kalinkovichi, was captured in a related drive moving north through the Pripet Marshes. More than 60 other populated places were captured by the advancing Russians as they broke German resistance.

A bold Russian attack in the Dnieper Bend, the town of Onufrievka, 10 miles south of Kremenchug, was captured.

Battles of great violence were raging on the lower flank of the Kiev bulge, with German tanks and infantry lunging forward under massive air cover, Moscow dispatches said.

the Adriatic and the Tyrrhenian Sea.

The capture of Alfedena placed the Eighth Army astride a fork of a main north-south road where it splits into two highways, one running on each side of the main range of the Apennines and both leading to a main lateral road to Rome. The distance by road from the Eighth Army's most advanced unit to Rome is well over 100 miles, compared to the 80 miles which separate Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army from the Italian capital by the Appian Way.

Weather Slows Operations

Stormy weather still curtailed operations along the lower reaches of the Sangro near the Adriatic and put a damper on Allied air operations throughout Italy.

Heavy artillery duels raged on the Fifth Army front in the Venafro-Pozzilli area.

Widespread and active patroling continued along the entire Fifth Army front as both sides probed each other's positions.

It was officially disclosed for the first time that the U.S. Thirty-sixth or Texas Division has been in action as part of the Fifth Army since September 9, when it was first to hit the beaches at Salerno. The division brought a Lone Star flag along and carried it into battle. It was disclosed yesterday that another famous unit, the Canadian "Princess Pats," was fighting with the Eighth Army.

Von Richthofen, Nazi Air Chief In Sicily, Shifted

Algiers, Nov. 24 (AP).—Allied headquarters announced today that Marshal Baron Wolfram von Richthofen, who commanded both the German and Italian air forces in the Sicilian campaign, had been removed to another assignment because of "difficult relations" with Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring.

"The Mediterranean war zone is proving to be a graveyard for the reputations of the Luftwaffe's chiefs," the statement said.

(This statement indicated Allied headquarters believes Kesselring still is in full command of the German air force in Italy, in spite of reports from neutral and Axis sources several weeks ago that he had been withdrawn from that theater.)

Von Richthofen is a cousin of the late Baron Manfred von Richthofen, famous German ace of the First World War.

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 24 (AP).—The Post-Enquirer said today that Maj. Everett J. Neuteboom of the Ordnance Service Command here has been reprimanded and ordered to apologize to Howard Robbins, photographer for the paper, who reported that Neuteboom struck him and threatened him when he sought permission to photograph a fire.

The paper said the reprimand from Maj. Gen. David McCoach, jr., commanding the Ninth Service Command at Fort Douglas, Utah, declared Major Neuteboom acted "without justification in forcibly ejecting newspapermen from the scene."

The fire, in a warehouse under Army jurisdiction, occurred November 8. Robbins said he asked the major for permission to take pictures, that the officer shoved him out of the room, struck him, and threatened three other newsmen with like treatment.

Rep. Luce Decries 'Cruel Destruction' Of Draft Setup

Representative Clare Boothe Luce (Republican) of Connecticut, said last night the law draws "a cruel and unfair distinction" between the homefront and the battlefront in responsibility of men of fighting age.

"Men who are sent to the battlefront are required by law to be prepared to die for freedom," she said in a speech on the National Forum of the Air. "Men of the same age, deferred on the homefront, are not even required by law to work for freedom."

not to have given some of those spankings."

Her husband, Mrs. Patton said, undoubtedly felt just like that in this instance. The "deed is done and the mistake made," she continued, "and I'm sure Georgie is sorrier and has punished himself more than anyone could possibly realize."

"I've known George Patton for 31 years and I've never known him to be deliberately unfair. He's made mistakes—and he's paid for them. This was a big mistake and he's paying a big price for it."

They expect the Senate to refuse to promote him to the permanent rank of major general and added it will "hurt but not maim him."

Mrs. Patton, the two Patton daughters and son, have had V-mail letters from the general, but in none of them did he mention the "fatal" day when he slapped a shellshocked enlisted man while on an inspection tour of an evacuation hospital.

"The first I knew of it I heard on a broadcast a few days ago," Mrs. Patton said, "so actually I know nothing about it at all and shouldn't say anything."

In the last war, General Patton was wounded in action and left to die on the battlefield, but the famed Patton "guts" kept him "in there pitching" until help came.

"But don't you go to writing any mush about him," his wife said last night. "I won't have it. He wouldn't like it.

"He made a mistake—and it can't be undone—I just hope they won't kick him to death while he's down."

war-weary and develop as frayed nerves as a private soldier. There may have been some extenuating circumstances in General Patton's case that we don't know about."

Chairman Andrew J. May of the House Military Committee who, like Reynolds, believes any action should be left to the Army, meanwhile steered his own committee through a business meeting without a move for a congressional investigation.

May's committee revised and reported a Senate-passed promotion bill modifying the 28-year Army service requirement for some officers up for advancement to general. The only reference to Patton at this meeting was questioning on whether Patton's advancement would be affected by the bill. It would not. He has served 34 years in the Army.

But during House floor debate Patton was bitterly attacked and a House Military Committee investigation demanded.

"Too Much Blood and Guts"

Said Representative Charles B. Hoeven (Republican) of Iowa:

"The fathers and mothers of America having boys in the service already weighed down by concern for the welfare of their sons now will have added anxiety of wondering whether or not their boys are being abused by hard-boiled officers. Perhaps we have too much "blood and guts" now. . . . If a soldier had struck a general we would have had a different story."

Representative Grant, from whose Indiana district came a story of what could be still another slapping incident, alone took the floor on the Army's side of the case.

In Mishawaka, Ind., the father of Pvt. Charles H. Kuhl had released a letter from his son, then confined in a Sicilian hospital suffering from malaria and shell shock. The letter, dated August 4, said: "General Patton slapped my face yesterday, and kicked me in the pants and cussed me."

Associated Press dispatches reported the incident now stirring Congress occurred August 10, and involved an unidentified soldier who had enlisted from a town in the Carolinas.

Grant announced "with considerable pride" a statement released yesterday by Kuhl's father, saying:

"I hold no personal feelings against General Patton. "If he is a good man, as they say, let's keep him. I am willing to let the case rest as is and drop the whole thing, and get on with the war . . . We don't want to stand in the way of a promotion for General Patton."

Said Grant: "That is the kind of stuff of which Americans are made!"

However, International News Service last night carried a dispatch from South Bend, Ind., quoting the father, Herman F. Kuhl, as saying:

"It's bad enough to face death in combat without having to contend with the type of officer General Patton represents.

"Patton said he lost his head. Well, we can't have a general who loses his head when thousands of soldiers depend upon his judgment. . . . Congress should immediately start an investigation to make certain this sort of thing is not repeated."

Yanks Take Last Of Gilbert Isles

the seizure of Betio. It enabled the "Devildogs" to concentrate their fire on masses of Nipponese instead of hunting them out one by one or in small groups.

Marshalls Bombed

The Nimitz communique also disclosed that heavy Liberator bombers of the Seventh Army Air Force continued to pound the Marshall Islands to the north in diversionary attacks. These raids started a week before the invasion of the Gilberts and have been repeated almost daily. The bombers, from bases in the Ellice Islands, south of the Gilberts, have been assisted by torpedo and dive-bombers from naval carriers.

Admiral Nimitz said it was too early to estimate casualties for either side accurately, but the Japanese losses "have been heavy." Mopping up now is proceeding on all three of the invaded atolls.

Capture of Betio within 76 hours—it was invaded last Saturday—set a record for the investment of any atoll or island in the Pacific where the defenders had been strongly entrenched. In their death stand the Japanese had the advantage of artillery and mortar positions, machine-gun nests, pillboxes and concentrated firepower. The island is considerably less than 2 miles long and a thousand yards wide.

Against such a defense the Marines poured ashore. They breached the defenses, and in fierce fighting, often hand-to-hand with bayonets, they pushed the enemy back and virtually annihilated him.

In comparison, it took the Nipponese 17 days to capture historic Wake Island early in the war. It was defended by a few hundred Marines.

The next step of the campaign will be to consolidate the newly won holdings in the Gilberts, presumably for a push into the Marshalls.

Capture of Makin, it was disclosed today, involved a spectacular enveloping move at dawn by troops of the Twenty-seventh Infantry Division. The action was preceded by heavy artillery fire The enveloping move involved a combined attack by infantry and tanks, first mention of the use of this weapon. The enemy was entrenched in pillboxes and concealed in blockhouses constructed of coral and cocoanut tree logs.

Nimitz, supreme commander in the midpacific area, hinted at a press conference Tuesday night of other attacks to spring from the success of this campaign. Asked where they would fall, he replied:

"Wherever the Japs are."

"It is our advantage to meet as often as we can and whittle the Jap down."

ican and Japanese warships in that sector since one November 1-2, during which a cruiser and four enemy destroyers were sunk while attempting to strike at the American Bougainville beachhead on Empress Augusta Bay. It was the first such encounter so near to Rabaul.

Torpedoes sank two of the destroyers before the enemy units turned to flee. But two more destroyers were sunk in the subsequent pursuit.

Only one Japanese ship escaped damage. Not an American warship was hit, General MacArthur said.

On Empress Augusta, marines and soldiers extended their jungle holdings while killing 75 Japanese in patrol actions.

Headquarters also reported another in a growing series of air blows being rained on Japan's vital supply ships. An 8000-ton merchantman was sunk by Liberators off Halmahera.

Direct Hits Scored

That was something in the nature of a new target area for the ship-hunting bombers, being northwest of the tip of Dutch New Guinea and due southeast of Midanao in the Philippines. Five direct hits and several damaging near misses sank the vessel.

Rabaul is on the northeastern end of New Britain. On the opposite end, which is vulnerable to invasion by MacArthur's forces on the Huon Gulf of New Guinea, the aerial bombardment of Gasmata moved into the fourth straight day, but this time it was on a more limited scale, the raid being carried out by Mitchells, which concentrated on supply dumps.

Another day passed without specific reports on the battle northwest of Finschhafen, New Guinea, against Japanese holding plateu positions in the inland jungles around Sattleberg. Australians last was reported within half a mile of their objective. Today's communique told of bombing and strafing attacks in the vicinity

No Cause for Intoxication

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Tokyo radio, enlarging on previous claims of American losses in naval operations off the Gilbert Islands, said today that 5000 casualties had been suffered by the United States forces.

Recorded by United States Government monitors, the broadcast said:

"The people on the home front must not become intoxicated with war victories, but must devote their full efforts to increasing aircraft production."

Another broadcast by Admiral Seizo Kobayashi, former Governor of Formosa, told his listeners that the Allies have changed their center of operations from the Solomons to the Gilberts and "can be expected to change again and carry out raids on Japan proper."

Ada Leonard Divorces Edward Brady of D. C.

C. She alleged Brady, whom she married in Crown Point, Ind., December 14, 1934, desetred her December 25, 1935.

Forts, B-24s Batter Sofia And Toulon

Algiers, Nov. 24 (INS).—A great fleet of American Flying Fortresses blasted the French Mediterranean naval base of Toulon today and a large formation of four-engined Liberators simultaneously smashed at Sofia, capital of Bulgaria.

It was the war's first raid on Toulon, which was occupied by the Germans a year ago when the French fleet was scuttled by its crews in that port.

A smaller force of the B-17 Fortresses at the same time smashed a coastal railroad viaduct near Cannes on the French Riviera to disrupt further German military traffic from France into Italy.

The Fortresses that hit Toulon pounded U-boat pens, docks and submarine repair facilities at that port, according to a communique tonight from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters. They were escorted by long-range Lightning fighters.

The Liberators that went to Sofia were unscathed. They ripped up tracks and installations in the railroad yards at the Bulgarian capital—the same target that was hit heavily nine days ago by Liberators in the war's first raid on Sofia.

Both the Fortresses and Liberators in today's attacks, which involved round-trip flights up to 1000 miles, belonged to the United States Army's Fifteenth Air Force.

The smash at Sofia hit one of the most vital hubs of the European rail network used by Hitler to move troops. Sofia is the main key to the entire Balkan rail system.

The announcement of the raids on Toulon and Sofia, 870 airline miles apart, did not state whether any of the Fortresses, Lightnings or B-24 Liberators were lost, or the nature of the enemy opposition encountered.

(Earlier Wednesday evening the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio announced that Toulon had been heavily bombed early in the afternoon and that "the number of the victims appears to be high.")

Germans Possess Conte Di Savoia, Reported Sunk

At Italian Government Headquarters in Southern Italy, Nov. 21 (Delayed) (AP).—The great Italian liner Conte di Savoia, frequently reported sunk, has been disclosed as still afloat under German control at Venice.

Italian naval officers said the ship had been camouflaged to resemble a small island in the Venice lagoon, with a make-believe villa, a garden and cows painted on top.

A high-ranking Italian officer said the Conte di Savoia had never been used since the day Italy entered the war.

Its sister ship, the Rex, has been at Trieste since the start of the war and was believed gutted by fire when its Italian crew set it ablaze at the time of the signing of the Italian armistice with the Allies.

Italian officers said they expect the Germans to destroy both liners.

Adm. Carpender Rewarded Again

A second Distinguished Service Medal has been awarded to Vice Admiral Arthur S. Carpender of Washington, who was decorated for capturing a German submarine in the last war, according to an AP report from Southwest Pacific Allied headquarters yesterday.

The new citation honors Carpender, whose home is at 2500 Q st. nw., for coordinating the naval activities of both the United States and the Allied forces in that area from September 11, 1942, to November 23, 1943, "to the utmost advantage of the limited resources available."

U. S. Bomber Ablaze After Crash Landing

SHOT UP IN NORWAY RAID—Ground crewmen fight a fire in the motor of a U. S. Liberator bomber that crash-landed at its base in England after a raid on Kjeller, Norway, November 19. Seven crew members parachuted to safety over the field, but the wounded ball turret gunner was unable to bail out, and the pilot, Second Lieut. Rockford C. Griffith, Tulsa, Okla., and Copilot Second Lieut. Lawrence W. Grono of Minneapolis set the battered plane down on one wheel for a crash landing

Reprisal-Wary

Berlin Repaid Many Fold, London Feels

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—There is a feeling of grim satisfaction today among Londoners, who took the thundering bombardment the Nazis gloatingly delivered through the black winter and spring of 1940-41, that Berlin is now getting it back manyfold.

But although hatred runs deep for the Germans who blasted, burned and broke businesses, homes, bodies and lives of hundreds of thousands of British people, there is no morbid exultation over the turn of tables. Memories of houses turned into rubble and human beings turned into shredded flesh are too fresh.

With a certain awe at the ordeal the Berliners are enduring, the Londoners feel rather sorry for them. At the same time, they accept the necessity for grinding the Nazi capital and its leaders into dust. It is too bad any people must go through such horror, but the Germans asked for it, is the general unemotional reaction.

The British, including Londoners and the fliers making the raids, take little note of the revenge aspects of the Berlin bombing. Instead, newspapers here are playing the accounts of the destruction and fires without going much further.

Tempering all thoughts about the Berlin attacks is the recognition that London's turn may come again at anytime. While the Germans are short of bombers in the west, nobody is so foolish as to not recognize they might quickly assemble a sufficient force from other fronts to give London a 500-plane raid.

(The Berlin radio Wednesday night quoted a German military spokesman as saying "we are to our regret forced to use our reprisal weapon" because of the RAF raids on Berlin. He declined to indicate what the reprisals would be or when they would be administered, Berlin said.)

Londoners face the prospect of reprisals realistically, and noticeably fewer of them take the "night out" or are seen in pubs on nights after the heavy RAF raids on Berlin.

Rival Yugoslav Guerillas Report New Gains

London, Nov. 24 (AP). — Gen. Draja Mihailovic announced today his Chetniks have gained control over the entire country of Montenegro and the adjacent Adriatic coastal area exclusive of the fortress region, indicating that his forces have hemmed in the Germans and pinned them to tenuous communications in the important port of Kotor.

Kotor is on Boka Kotorska, a gulf on the narrow strip of the Dalmation coast that separates Montenegro from the Adriatic Sea, and the city is regarded as one of the greatest potential invasion ports of southern Yugoslavia.

Meanwhile, the rival Yugoslav guerilla forces of Gen. Josip Brox (Tito) reported fresh defensive successes against the Germans farther north. A broadcast communique said Tito's Partisans, aided by formations of the Italian Venezia Division, had wiped out a Bulgarian battalion in a battle near Krema in western Serbia, killing about 100 soldiers and taking 70 prisoners.

The Partisans reported bitter defensive battles in Dalmatia, in the Croat coastal region around Novi, where a German attack was repelled, and in the Drava Valley. They also announced that their units occupied iron ore mines near Banjaluka, in western Bosnia.

Tito's troops, the communique said, fought fiercely in Macedonia to prevent the Germans from breaking through from Albania toward Skoplje, and this struggle was said to center near Debar.

The Partisan communique omitted mention of the northern Adriatic islands guarding the entrance to Fiume, indicating that the Germans may have been successful at last in their long and bloody efforts to seize these strategically important positions.

Huge Estimate Of Bengal Deaths Declared Modest

New Delhi, Nov. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, president of the All-India Women's Conference and sister of Jawaharlal Nehru, told correspondents at a conference tonight that an estimate of 100,000 starvation deaths weekly in Bengal was "quite modest."

She expressed belief that the number of deaths was increasing because of epidemics of cholera, malaria and beri beri.

She said a large number of young women in famine areas had "disappeared" and, according to reliable reports, had gone into Calcutta brothels.

"Money is welcome," she said in reference to the formation of assistance groups, "but we need food."

Mail Parcels Before Dec. 1, PO Urges

The public was urged yesterday by the Postoffice Department to mail Christmas packages before the end of November and to "zone" all mail being sent to District residents or take a chance that gifts and other Christmas mail will not reach their destinations on time.

The zoning system, used for the first time this year, works this way: If you do not know the postal zone in which the recipient of the mail lives call the postoffice, ask for the superintendent of mails and his office will furnish it. In the case of long mailing lists postal officials said if the lists were mailed them they would be returned with the proper zones marked.

After securing the zone number mark it on the outside of your letter or package. In this way, it was pointed out, inexperienced postal employes can immediately dispose of the matter without having to go through the labor of looking up the individual zone.

Postal officials predicted a much heavier Christmas mail this year than last and said that in other years they had felt free to predict when mail, sent at a certain time, would be received but that this year it depended entirely on railway facilities available.

It was also urged that packages be wrapped well and the contents condensed in as small a space as possible. Mailing of large packages is discouraged this year.

U. S. Agencies' Actors Spread Gospel of 'Lip-Buttoning'

In the movies a slinky, black-haired siren lures war information from a drugged officer, but in the Capitol an innocent-appearing bystander can learn just as much—and with less to-do—from a talkative Government worker.

For Federal employes who doubt it, a sketch called "Somebody Talked" has been written exclusively to show just how it can be done. Produced by the Victory Players of the Speakers Bureau of the American Theater Wing, it is being dramatized during working hours at Government agencies throughout the city.

Written at OWI request, the play is part of the Nation-wide program to assure security of military information through "buttoned" lips. About 14,000 Government workers have already learned that "careless talk costs lives," since "Somebody Talked" was premiered at the Department of Labor November 10.

Some 34,000 more will learn the same lesson in the next three weeks, as four troupes (two from the Speakers' Bureau, one from George Washington University and one from King-Smith Playhouse) bring it from agency to agency. Government workers, released from their jobs temporarily for the special war security job, highlight the casts.

The booking is solid for the 4-episode drama, which was written by Peggy Lamson, director of the Speakers Bureau.

"Somebody Talked" shows how four somebodies talked—small somebodies whose casually repeated information meant little separately but, incorporated, resulted in thousands of deaths to American servicemen during the invasion of the mythical island of Svenston. Government workers can watch how four like them may be overheard in streetcars, taxis, bars and restaurants, by an enemy agent who knows how to put 2 and 2 together.

House Passes Own Tax Bill, Unchanged, by 200-to-27 Vote

Department, perhaps $4,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000, likewise may be recaptured, due to changes in the war requirements.

As if to underline the declaration of congressional independence on taxation, Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat) of North Caroline, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, told the House:

"This is not a Treasury bill, a joint staff bill, a CIO bill, a Chamber of Commerce bill or a National Association of Manufacturers' bill. It is a Ways and Means Committee bill and for it we assume full and sole responsibility."

Promises Reductions

Representative Harold Knutson of Minnesota, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means group, noting that the measure was the seventh tax bill projected since the Roosevelt Administration took over in 1933, promised "a reduction of taxes in the future, rather than continual increases," if the Republicans make gains in the next election.

Schedule of Increases

The increases provided for in the House bill in their broad categories follow:

Individual income ..	$154,800,000
Corporations (Excess profits) ..	616,000,000
Selected excise levies	1,201,700,000
Postal rates	166,800,000
Total	$2,139,300,000

Committee members insisted they had sought to keep the pledge made early this year that no increase would be made in individual income taxes in 1944, due to the 25 per cent carry-over of unforgiven 1942 tax liability, payable in equal installments in 1944 and 1945 as the result of placing income tax collections on a current basis.

Says Confusion Remains

They explained, however, that the income tax had been "simplified" by its integration with the victory tax, an accomplishment vigorously disputed by Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart (Republican) of California. On this subject Mr. Gearhart, the sole committee dissenter, told the House yesterday before he offered an unsuccessful motion to recommit the measure:

"All the confusion and complications of the present law are still here. The people are going to be disappointed when they find they have to go through the same gyrations they had to go through with their income taxes September 15."

The bill affects personal income taxes as follows:

1. The victory tax is repealed.
2. The normal tax is increased from 6 per cent to 10, to replace the victory tax.
3. Present personal exemptions and credit for dependents are retained. The surtax schedule is adjusted to bring it into line with elimination of the victory tax.
4. The earned income credit is repealed. Married persons filing separate returns are limited to a single person's exemption of $500 each. Joint returns still carry $1200 exemption.
5. A minimum tax of 3 per cent of the net income in excess of a special personal exemption of $500 for a single person and $700 for married persons, and $100 as a credit for each dependent is provided, as a means of retaining on the tax rolls at about their present burdens some 9,000,000 to 12,000,000 persons now remitting victory taxes but with earnings not large enough to come under the income levies at present exemptions.
6. The new bill would deny deduction for sums paid on Federal excises—such as those for gasoline and admisisons—in computing individual tax returns.

Turkey Loaded Truck Stolen

Taking a short cut to the limited turkey supply in Washington, unidentified men yesterday drove off with a truck filled with $560 worth of turkeys and eggs, according to its owner, Herman Witt, of the wholesale poultry firm, Joseph Witt Sons, 710 O st. nw.

Stolen in front of 1355 U st. nw., the truck was recovered by police around 6 p m., six hours after it was driven away, but only one turkey and 30 dozen eggs were left.

Estimates Put Cost of Canol Aviation Gas at $2.76 a Gallon finery, wells and pipeline, which Fulton asserts will amount to no inconsiderable sum.

Representative Gavin (Republican) of Pennsylvania yesterday declared that there were between 2000 and 2500 experienced oil workers employed on the project. He told reporters he was going to press for cancellation of the project. The Army should cut its losses, he said, and divert its attention to wells in the United States, which will produce much more than 3000 barrels of crude oil per day.

Wells Exceeded Estimate

Brig. Gen. Walter B. Pyron, former executive vice president of the Gulf Oil Company, now War Department petroleum expert, told the committee yesterday that the Canadian wells had exceeded his estimate of 3000 barrels of crude oil a day, and said the Department was considering enlarging its refinery so that more than 479 barrels of gasoline could be produced daily. The Army, he said, was seeking a 20,000 barrel crude oil production daily.

Under questioning he added that if the War Department does not obtain the finest equipment for refining oil into high octane gas—equipment which ranks as among the scarcest machinery in the United States—60 per cent of the components of the aviation gasoline would have to be shipped up from the United States, and added to the 479 barrels produced in Canada. The War Production Board so far has blocked attempts to secure such equipment, believing it is more needed in this country where approximately one billion gallons of gasoline of all kinds are produced daily.

Truman Draws a Laugh

Because of the improvements made in its oil properties with U. S. funds, the Imperial Oil Co., Fulton told reporters, has been able to obtain 160,000 barrels of crude oil from the fields in 1943.

In all the previous 10½ years only 128,000 barrels were taken from the wells by Imperial, the committee counsel pointed out.

Pyron was questioned by Truman concerning the kind of memoranda and directives issued by the War Department concerning this project. Indicating the department was too pressed to worry about paper work, he said.

"You understand the Army's method of operation."

Truman drew a laugh when he retorted quickly:

"That's just it. We don't."

Britain's Union Council Assails Mosley's Release

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—Britain's powerful Trades Union Council, representing six million workers, today assailed Home Secretary Herbert Morrison's cabinet-approved action releasing Sir Oswald Mosley as a "most untimely blunder" and demanded that "the whole question immediately be reconsidered by the government."

The TUC said it "wholeheartedly indorses the resolution of the National Council of Labor (repudiating the move) and disassociates itself emphatically from the action of the Home Secretary."

The Trades Council declared the decision to grant the former British Fascist leader even conditional freedom from prison "was taken without due regard for its effect on public opinion in this and other countries."

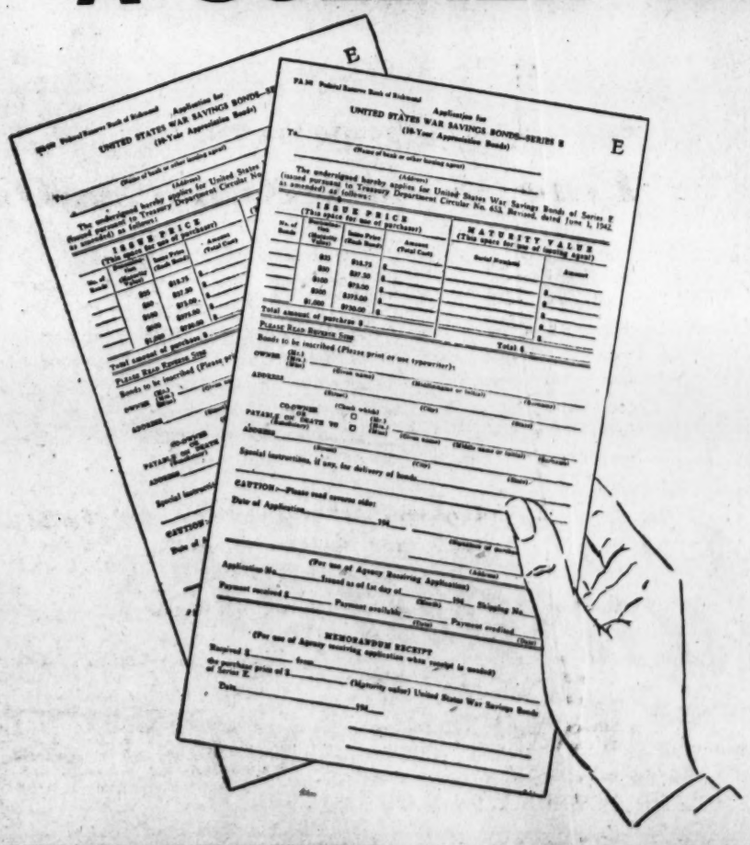
WHAT WOULD YOU THINK OF A SOLDIER WHO MADE THAT STATEMENT?



—well, soldiers think the same thing about you . . . when you say "I bought a War Bond last month — that is all I can spare"

You have a perfect right to expect Soldiers, Sailors and Marines to fight your battle at the front—to the death if necessary as many of them are doing every day.

They have the same right to expect you to furnish the money that buys them the materials with which to fight . . . not what you have left over after you have bought many things you do not need, made the rounds of the night spots, indulged yourself, your family and your friends in unnecessary luxuries.

If it is right for them to fight without thought of self . . . it is right for you to buy War Bonds and forget the things you can do without.

Zoo Animals Roam Berlin After Bombing

Allehanda said, quoting a Scandinavian telegraph bureau dispatch. The embassy was a casualty of the RAF's return performance last night.

Reports to the Swedish press said parts of Berlin were "an inferno of flames," while other sections were pulverized by blockbusting bombs. Telephone and telegraph communications and transport in and with Berlin were paralyzed.

The capital was virtually isolated.

Untold thousands were killed. One estimate put the death toll at 25,000 in the Monday night raid alone, although most guesses were lower than this.

Eyewitnesses reaching Sweden gave a picture of Berlin as a torch of ruins. Fires were so intense, one said, that "asphalt on the pavements boiled."

Even before the raiders returned Tuesday night with a load of destruction rivaling the 2300 long tons lossed Monday, an eyewitness account described Berlin as "still one big fire."

"Fires still were burning fiercely at noon Tuesday and the heat was so terrible it was almost impossible to walk or drive on some streets," one refugee said. "I saw people collapse on the pavement from the intense heat. There were awful scenes everywhere."

The newspaper Aftontidningen reported new fires set last night soon merged with old conflagrations burning since Monday.

The intense heat was said to have caused the same phenomenon that occurred in the Hamburg blitz: Great suctions and cyclonic winds were generated which sent flames towering into virtual vacuums above Berlin.

Entire blocks of 10 to a dozen squares were declared masses of fire with which fighters were utterly unable to cope.

Berlin could not be reached by telephone or telegraph. Ironically, Swedish telegrams to Berlin were routed to Hamburg, the destruction of which set the grim pattern for the leveling of the capital.

Because Berlin is the center of all Europe dominated by Hitler, the whole continent was affected.

Virtually the only embassies on the Tiergartenstrasse which escaped destruction or damage were the Japanese and Italian. One unconfirmed report said the Eden Hotel on Budapestersrasse near the zoo was destroyed.

The Potsdam Railway station was reported in rubble.

The Haus Vaterland, widely known as a tourist amusement center, was said to have been smashed.

Every building in the zoo district was reported wrecked, though there were no reports of wild beasts at large. Fashionable restaurants, including the Traube, were casualties. The UFA Palace, Berlin's largest motion picture theater, was destroyed.

Escaping Swedes said going to the Templehof airdrome was like "going through an inferno."

The newspaper Allehanda said the entire area from the Lehrter Bahnhof to the Lustgarten was a "mass of flames."

Fighting not only fires but suffocating smoke, and menaced constantly by exploding delayed-action bombs, all workers were a weary lot after more than 48 sleepless hours.

Berlin all day Tuesday was "almost as dark as night" because of the smoke pall, another witness reported. At night fires illuminated the city.

One traveler said that Berliners expected the RAF to return Tuesday night, as they did, and tens of thousands of persons not assigned to fire fighting or air raid defense took refuge outside the capital before nightfall.

"Apocalyptical Scene"

Bern, Nov. 24 (INS).—A neutral diplomat today told a correspondent of the Gazette de Lausanne that he estimated 400,000 residents of Berlin were bombed out of their homes during Monday night's RAF assault alone, and that the city presented an "apocalyptical scence," with "a thousand fires."

He said he was visiting a friend near Tiergarten Monday night. He and his friend, said the diplomat, at first thought the alarm was only for a British scouting patrol until they heard the roar of motors characteristic of huge formations of bombers.

Plundering assumed proportions unknown after other raids and placards posted by police announced that 22 persons had been shot for such offenses within 10 hours of the raid, after sentencing by speedy justice courts, he asserted.

Berlin's residents felt secure under cover of a thick fog.

"The people next door were some of the half-million persons evacuated by Goebbels' hasty order in expectation of just such a raid," the diplomat recounted. "They were sent to a farm in Bavaria, where they were treated so miserably that they returned. More than 100,000 evacuated Berliners returned just in time to get the bombing they planned to escape."

War Sidelights

British Equip New Fighter With Bombs

London (Thursday), Nov. 25 (AP). Development of a new super Mosquito fighter-bomber was disclosed today by the British manufacturers, the DeHaviland Aircraft Co.

The craft combines the armament of the plywood mosquito fighter and can carry 100 pounds of bombs, or half the capacity of the Mosquito bomber, without sacrificing the plane's 400-mile-an-hour speed.

Royal Entertainment

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—That "special mission to London" on which Capt. Quentin Roosevelt and a group of fellow officers came here today turned out to be the surprise of their lives—a Thanksgiving Eve party at Buckingham Palace.

Roosevelt—a grandson of the late President Theodore Roosevelt—was among some 300 American officers, WACS and nurses, including Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander European theater of operations, U. S. Army, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander European waters, U. S. Navy, who were entertained informally by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Russian, Jap Parley

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Vichy radio said tonight that Japanese Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu had received Constantin Smetanin, Soviet Ambassador to Japan, in a one-hour audience.

17 Belgians Executed

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—Seventeen Belgians were executed today at the direction of a single court martial for sabotage and other resistance to the Germans, the Belgian News Agency reported.

Hitler in Shelter In Raid on Berlin

At the Swiss-German Frontier, Nov. 24 (AP).—Adolf Hitler sat out the RAF's record raid on Berlin Monday night in a Reichschancellery air-raid shelter emerged unharmed and left the stricken city, frontier advices said tonight.

The Fuehrer was said to have been conferring with Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command, and War Production Chief Albert Speer, when the sirens sounded.

Germany Puts Jutland on Alert

Stockholm (Thursday), Nov. 25 (AP).—The Germans have placed the entire Jutland territory of Denmark—one of the shortest routes from Britain to Berlin—in a state of military alarm and were reported today to have massed 250,000 men there in anticipation of an Allied invasion.

Italian Army Officers Reported Shot by Nazis

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Uniformed Italian army officers taken prisoner by the Nazis in fighting in Montenegro, Albania and the Aegean Islands are being shot, the Bari radio station of the Badoglio government charged tonight in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

The broadcast said a protest regarding this "fresh crime" had been communicated to all Allied and neutral governments.

Mighty Raiding Force Roars Over Europe for Third Night

will to win cannot be shaken."

With an armada only slightly smaller than the 1000-plane force which had struck Monday night, the RAF returned to the German capital Tuesday night and, its targets lighted by the fires started in the earlier raid, dropped an estimated 1400 long tons of bombs.

The scale of destruction plus the relatively low cost in bombers—26 Monday night and 20 last night—in successive air bombardment made it clear that the heart of Hitlerdom must find a way to check the British bomber command with more severe losses or face methodical obliberation.

It was unmistakably clear that aside from the physical damage to the Nazi administrative offices in the center of Berlin and to the large war industries in the suburbs, the Allied aerial drive was the war's greatest offensive against enemy morale.

A spokesman for the British Ministry of Economic Warfare said the raids had caused a sharp decline in industrial production but that there was little evidence of defeatism, although German spirits were low as the result of the two heavy attacks on Berlin.

Although the Germans clamped strict censorship on reports of damage, after letting floods of stories through during the first hours of confusion following Monday night's record raid, travelers reaching Switzerland and Sweden told of the "utter chaos" in Berlin, and described the city as "in a terrible state."

Apparently no section of the city was spared; eyewitnesses told of the destruction of government buildings in the heart of the city and of industrial plants located in the suburbs.

Fires still blazing from Monday night's raid guided RAF pilots to the city last night, and returning fliers said they could see the streets of Berlin plainly and that they "never saw fires" like those raging through the buildings lining the thoroughfares.

Although the Monday night raid was made during bad weather with heavy clouds over the target, the sky was relatively clear last night. However, only a few Nazi night fighters came up to meet the raiders and British crewmen said the flak, while heavy, was not as bad as on Monday's raid.

Reports reaching Switzerland said Berliners complained bitterly of the "passive defense" put up by the Nazis.

A neutral diplomat told the correspondent of the Lausanne Gazette that the effects of the raids on the residents of the German capital could not yet fully be measured because "many still are stupefied by the catastrophe."

Late this afternoon DNB, the German news agency, broadcast extracts from Berlin newspapers which urged the people to keep up their courage.

"This is an hour for deeds, not for great words," said the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. "But one thing we may say—dragon seed sown by England will bear fruit."

The Berliner Nachtausgabe said, "Painful and often irreplaceable though our losses may be, they can only prove that the enemy is unable of finding another means of forcing Germany to her knees and that he has given up hope of overcoming Germany in honorable combat."

A Berlin broadcast quoted a spokesman as saying "the Fuehrer repeatedly has emphasized Germany never wished for such kind of war conduct and never started such."

A clandestine German radio station heard in Stockholm warned the Germans today that the RAF attacks on Berlin were "the last warning" to the people to overthrow Hitler and sue for peace. The source of this and similar broadcasts has never been determined and it even has been suggested that they are part of the Nazi propaganda ministry's own offensive.

The RAF's success with night bombing, even through clouds which obscure the target, is due to two things:

1. The pathfinder system by which specially trained squadrons go ahead and outline the target with a rain of flares.
2. The perfection of navigation enabling the pathfinders to locate the targets precisely even in bad weather.

Injured in Raid

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—A Nazi transocean broadcast said tonight that Dr. Paul Schmidt, German foreign office press spokesman, was in a hospital suffering from concussion of the brain as a result of last night's air raid on Berlin.

Thanksgiving Day 1943

A GOOD DAY TO

Buy Another War Bond

THOSE FIRST PILGRIMS, you remember, proclaimed a day of Thanksgiving for a good harvest. The stinging cold was their constant companion . . . the pangs of hunger gnawed unceasingly . . . they were sick and lonely . . . but they gave thanks . . . the few who had managed to survive. Because, regardless of other shortages, there was plenty of FREEDOM, and it was food and drink and shelter for those who were starving for it.

¶ The men at Valley Forge celebrated Thanksgiving, too, and so did the troops in Blue and Grey, four score years ago.

¶ So this year, our men in service, from the hot sands of Tunisia to the cold, barren wastes of Attu . . . from the depths of the Pacific to the skies over Europe . . . our men will pause for a word of Thanksgiving.

¶ And you Americans, here at home . . . be truly thankful for your FREEDOM . . . and do all you can to preserve it. In short, BUY MORE WAR BONDS.

We have much to be Thankful for

There was a pioneer Thanksgiving, when men and women rejoiced that the land was fruitful, the harvest was good.

There was a Civil War Thanksgiving, when a President first asked this nation to pause and count its blessings.

There was a Thanksgiving in 1918, when the whole world rejoiced at the ending of bitterness and bloodshed.

There was even a Thanksgiving in 1942 when the news, at long last, was good, and our own troops were sweeping the enemy before them.

This year we have more reason to be thankful!

Thankful that in a half-slave world, we are wholly free—in mind, in spirit, in deed.

Thankful that in a famished world, our land is still fruitful, our harvests are good.

Thankful that in a world of dictatorships, ours is still a government of, by and for the people.

Thankful that we can look back on a long string of successes—and look forward to the final victory we shall inevitably win.

Thankful, above all, that we are Americans!

Church Services to Usher In Second Wartime Thanksgiving

Following services in scores of churches last night, the Nation's Capital prepared to observe today its second wartime Thanksgiving.

MANSELL

Among today's highlights will be the thirty-fourth annual Pan-American mass at 10:30 a. m. at St. Patrick's Catholic Church at 10th and G sts. nw., to which Vice President and Mrs. Wallace and representatives of North and South American governments have accepted invitations to attend.

They will include Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, Ambassador of Peru and dean of the Diplomatic Corps; Dr. L. E. Rowe, director general, Pan American Union; Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will celebrate the mass; the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate, will preside, and the Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, new rector of Catholic University, will preach.

McCORMICK

Many neighborhood and individual religious services are planned for this morning throughout the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Worshipers of the Bloomingdale area will meet at 10:30 a. m. at Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R sts. nw. The Rev. M. P. German will preach. Mount Pleasant congregations will worship together at 11 a. m. at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia rd. nw.

Services at the Washington Cathedral will include Communion at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m.; sermon, 11 a. m., and evensong, 4 p. m.

In the spirit of Christian sharing, the congregation of Central Presbyterian Church, 15th and Irving sts. nw., will turn over its Thanksgiving service offering today to the Washington Presbyterian Home. The Rev. W. F. Mansell, the new pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. on "Thanksgiving in a Troubled World."

HUGHES

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Washington Methodist resident bishop, will preach at 11 a. m. at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw.

Services at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette sq. will include Communion at 7:30 and 12 noon, and morning prayer and sermon at 11 a. m., with Dr. Robbins preaching.

TABOR

An interfaith note dominated Thanksgiving Eve services last night, as the Washington Hebrew Congregation, for the first time in its 90-year history, joined with downtown Protestant congregations in services at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, was the speaker.

Thanksgiving Eve services at Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church also marked the 19th anniversary of the present edifice's dedication. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, spoke. Another interesting service in the Mount Pleasant area was at Calvary Methodist Church, where Representative Walter H. Judd, of Minnesota, spoke.

Brig. Gen. Frank H. Hines, administrator of Veterans' Affairs, read the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation at services last night at Grace Lutheran Church.

Prof. Frazier to Speak At Sociology Meeting

Prof. E. Franklin Frazier, head of the department of sociology at Howard University, will deliver a paper entitled "The Social Psychology of Americans: Nationalist versus Internationalist Implications," before the American Sociological Society meeting in New York December 4-5.

Sociologists from 37 colleges and universities will participate in the sessions which will deal chiefly with war problems and the normal peacetime interests of the sociological profession.

Women Barred From Jury, Court Quashes Indictment in Sabotage Case

Cedar Rapids, Nov. 24 (AP).—In a decision upsetting a 23-year-old precedent, Federal Judge John W. Delehant quashed an indictment for sabotage against Louis Roemig, jr., 44, on the grounds that the grand jury which indicted him was illegally selected because women were deliberately excluded from jury service in Federal Courts in the northern Iowa district.

Judge Delehant made his ruling yesterday in sustaining a defense motion to quash the indictment at the opening of the trial of Roemig, who was indicted on a Federal charge of sabotage accusing him of starting a $250,000 fire at the Amana Society Refrigeration plant last June 7.

Indictments which had been returned by the same jury against two other persons also were quashed, although in one case the defendant already had entered a plea of innocent.

The ruling paved the way for women to sit on Federal juries in the district for the first time. Women serve on juries in State courts and in the Southern Iowa District of Federal Court.

Before the ruling it was brought out by testimony of court officials that Federal Judge George C. Scott, who retired November 1 as Federal judge in the district after serving 21 years, had orally instructed clerks and deputy clerks to exclude the names of women from jury lists.

Defense Attorney R. S. Milner, in asking that the indictment be quashed, called attention to the fact that women have been qualified voters and so eligible for jury service since 1920, but never have been permitted to serve in that district.

The opinion of attorneys seemed unanimous that Judge Delehant's decision would have no effect on persons indicted by former grand juries in the District because those cases have been adjudicated and settled by the court.

United States Commissioner R. L. Whelan today bound Roemig over to the next grand jury. The other two defendants were at liberty on their original bonds of $3000 each

ITU to Decide on AFL Reaffiliation

The International Typographical Union will hold a special referendum election on reaffiliation with the American Federation of Labor next Tuesday, the AFL weekly news service disclosed yesterday.

The ITU left the federation in 1937, when it refused to pay a special AFL assessment destined for an anti-CIO "war chest."

The news service stated that Lewis M. Herrmann, chairman of the AFL referendum committee of Newark Typographical Union, No. 103, said that "reports from all parts of the country indicate a strong swing of sentiment for reaffiliation with the AFL."

Terms of settlement already have been outlined by the AFL—a guarantee of autonomous rights of the printers' union in return for cancellation of all past indebtedness of the ITU to the AFL.

Messe, New Chief of Staff, Pledges 'Purge' Reorganization of Italian Army

By Wes Gallagher

At Italian Government Headquarters in Southern Italy, Nov. 21. (Delayed) (AP)— Small, dynamic Marshal Giovanni Messe declared today that a complete purge of the Italian army was necessary to remove technically incompetent and politically dangerous officers.

In an interview a few hours after taking over as the new chief of staff, the General pledged a reorganization of the army to make it an effective fighting force.

The most vigorous army officer to appear on the Italian government scene thus far, Messe commanded the First Italian Army in Tunisia and was the last Axis general to surrender there.

In contrast to the lazy, almost stagnant movement in most Italian government offices, the marshal's headquarters functioned at high speed even though this was Sunday. A constant stream of visitors poured through for a few words with the man who had just replaced Gen. Vittorio Ambrosio.

During the interview, Marshal Messe repeatedly emphasized his points with sharp, short gestures of his hands.

"Job Above Politics"

Asked if he planned to resign when Rome is reached, as Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio has pledged himself to do, Messe replied:

"My job is above politics and I am taking no part in them. If the new government, whether it be Communist, Socialist or Conservative, asks me to go, I will go, just as I came to this job. Or if they ask me to stay, I will stay."

In declining to discuss political aspects of the government, Messe said, "I am not a politician. I am a soldier. I have no political work. What I have is a technical job."

He gave a brief sketch of current activity by the Italian armed forces in the Balkans and in the Alps.

Short on Supplies

In the Alps, he said, a considerable number of mountain troops and others are fighting the Germans, but are short of ammunition and food, although efforts are being made to supply them.

Units of the Italian fleet also are cooperating with the Allies in the Mediterranean, he added.

The marshal said he wished it would be possible to call for volunteers to fight from among the Italian prisoners of war now being held by the Allies, since many of them have valuable technical training.

Messe, who spent several months as a captive, praised the way the United States and Britain are treating Italian war prisoners.

Army Control Of Jap Camp Is Demanded

By the Associated Press

The Senate Military Affairs Committee heard a demand yesterday that trouble-torn Tulelake (Calif.) Japanese evacuation camps be placed under permanent Army control but deferred action on pending legislation in the face of stout Army opposition to the move.

War Department representatives told an executive session of the committee that operation of Tulelake, housing 15,000 Japanese evacuated from military areas, would place a needless burden on the Army. They said, in effect, that the Army did not want to take on operation of civilian evacuation as well as military internment camps.

Coddling Blamed

Representative Engle (Democrat) of California charged before the committee that "coddling" of internees was responsible for a series of disturbances between November 1 and 4 at Tulelake, and contended Army supervision would be the only way to correct conditions.

Maj. Gen. Miller White, assistant chief of staff, was one of several War Department witnesses.

Dillon S. Myer, director of the War Relocation Authority, defended that agency's operation of Tulelake during testimony in which he was quoted by committee members as saying that reports of the early November disturbances had been exaggerated and that steps to prevent any further disorders were being taken.

Myer said WRA personnel and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have been segregating the "trouble-makers" in separate barracks at the camp, and proposed as further safeguards the fencing of various sections of the camp, and furnishing of additional night guards by the Army. He said such a security program could be carried out within 30 to 60 days.

2000 to Be Segregated

Before the segregation program is completed, some 2000 of the Japanese in the camp may be placed in separate and closely guarded barracks, Myer was reported to have told the committee. He said, however, that the trouble-makers originally numbered only about 60 persons.

Senator Downey (Democrat) California, announced he was leaving for his home State Friday and planned a personal investigation at Tulelake, after which he would make a report to the committee which is considering a bill by Senators Wallgren (Democrat) Washington, and Holman Republican) Oregon, to transfer all of the WRA's functions to the War Department.

Reprisals Threatened

San Francisco, Nov. 24 (AP).—Tokyo radio today quoted a spokesman for the Japanese Bureau of Information as saying treatment of Japanese interned at the relocation center at Tule Lake, Calif., was "illegal and inhuman," and that Japan now "may have to reconsider the treatment being given Americans in Japan."

The radio quoted the spokesman, Sabo Iguchi, as saying trouble at Tule Lake was caused by the "strong indignation' of camp residents regarding "compulsory labor" and he said the Spanish consul in San Francisco had been asked to investigate.

latter's rationing proposal and other phases of the liquor shortage will be discussed.

Representing retailers will be Max Dorfman, Benjamin Moss and Bernard Oser, all officers of the local association. Harry Wechsler, president of the association, last night said he expected to be present also.

Neither Wechsler nor Thomas Lodge, ABC Board chairman, would make any statements last night on the rationing proposal or other suggestions made by retailers to the board in a communication Monday night.

However, it was learned that dealers have encountered much consumer opposition to the plan which would limit customers to one bottle at a time unless a permit was secured from the ABC Board.

Other features of the plan would require a purchaser to display his OPA ration book before a sale could be made, a nonresident to secure an ABC permit before making a purchase, and the formation of wholesale and retail liquor dealer committees to sit with the board at regular intervals for discussion of supply and demand. Another provision would require wholesalers to post daily receipts with the board with prices and information as to the quality of whisky on hand.

Chinese Capture Taoyuan, Cutting Vital 'Rice' Route

Chungking, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Japanese have cut the vital rice highway route from Hunan Province to Szechwan by capturing Taoyuan, 16 airline miles southwest of Changteh, the Chinese high command announced today.

All Japanese efforts to take Changteh have been resisted and further Japanese attempts to bypass the city have been checked.

Chinese forces counterattacking at different points around Hankow broke into a Japanese strongpoint east of that city in central China and also reached the outskirts of the highway town of Tsaochin, 60 miles northwest of Hankow.

3 Men From D. C. Area Killed, 2 Reported Missing in Action

Three Washington area men have been killed in action and two are missing, it was learned yesterday.

The War Department announced that Capt. Lawrence D. Lichliter, 227 14th pl. ne., and Tech. Fifth Grade O'Dell Wimbish, 2219 South Glebe rd., Arlington, Va., had been killed while serving in the Mediterranean combat zone, and that Lieut. Robert W. Withrow, 3107 North 4th st., Arlington, and Pvt. Wilson S. Gregory, 2419 18th st. nw. were missing in action, while the Navy Department reported the death of Steward's Mate Second Class Herman Matthew Johnson of Oxon Hill, Md.

LICHLITER

WITHROW

Captain Lichliter, 27, who was reported missing in action since August, was killed 3 miles inland from the coast of Sicily on July 10, according to information received by his father, F. D. Lichliter of the 14th pl. address. Born in Shenandoah County, Va., Captain Lichliter was a graduate of Eastern High School and the University of Maryland. He enlisted in the Air Forces in September, 1941, and was commissioned at Turner Field, Albany, Ga., in May, 1942. Overseas since November, 1942, he was promoted to captain while serving with a troop carrier group in the Middle East.

Corporal Wimbish, who was also killed in the Mediterranean, is the son of Mrs. Delia Smith of Arlington.

Lieutenant Withrow, 25, reported missing in action in Europe, was awarded the soldier's medal for heroism displayed while on duty with the Coast Artillery at Oahu, Hawaii, February 25, 1942. At that time he removed valuable equipment from a blazing plane which had crashed in the waters off shore of the island.

Inducted into military service at Arlington, Va., April, 1941, he was sent to Hickam Field, Hawaii, after three months training at Fort Eustis and was stationed at the field during the attack December 7, 1941. Subsequently he applied for training as an air cadet and received a commission as a second lieutenant.

He was born in Badin, N. C., and moved to Arlington with his family in 1933. He attended Washington-Lee High School, where he was an outstanding football and basket ball player. Following his graduation in 1936, he was employed by the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Arlington postoffice.

Private Gregory, 31, a resident of Washington for seven years, was born in Greensboro, N. C., where he attended school. He was employed by Carl and Dave's Grill before entering the service in May, 1942. Trained as an infantry soldier at Camp Landing, La. and Camp Edwards, Mass., he was sent overseas last September.

Definition Of FCC Power Requested

By the Associated Press

A member of the Federal Communications Commission told a congressional committee yesterday that the agency is pervaded with "the doctrine of instituting social reforms through seizing powers not granted it."

T. A. M. Craven of the FCC expressed that opinion in response to questions from Eugene L. Garey, counsel for the special House committee investigating the FCC. Garey asked whether he had observed any "earmarks" in the agency's policies of the "communistic technique known as cessation of gradualism."

"That's a matter of opinion," Craven replied, but added that the commission had "undertaken upon itself legislative acts and adopted policies not granted it by Congress."

Craven frequently has differed with a majority of the commission.

"Such an attitude," Craven continued, "constitutes in a sense a trend toward cessation of gradualism-which I interpret as a method by which you impose social reforms of your own choosing without consulting the chosen representatives of the people."

Craven expressed belief that the FCC had gone beyond its powers, as defined by the congressional act creating it, but said nevertheless its present policies apparently had the sanction of the Supreme Court. A court majority, he observed, upheld FCC rulings involving broadcasting chains which Craven said in effect permit the commission to regulate the composition of radio programs.

This decision, Craven said, "strikes at the very core of free radio in a free democratic country like ours."

But the real freedom of radio, he asserted, "is the freedom from fear of Government reprisal "in t' form of license controls.

Describing the commission's present policies as "narrow, restrictive and discouraging," Craven said that w t is needed are "reasonable regulations by reasonable men."

Caesar, First U. S. War-Trained Dog in Solomons, Aided Marines as Messenger in Bitter Fight

(The following story, distributed by the Associated Press, was written by Corpl. Harold A. Breard, USMC, of Monroe, La.)

Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., Nov. 24.—He came, he saw and he is helping to conquer. And in the process, he established another "first" for the pioneering United States Marines.

Caesar, who received his training at Camp Lejeune, was the first dog ashore when the Marines landed on Bougainville Island, last major Japanese stronghold in the Solomons. That is something in itself, but it assumes major importance in that it marked the first utilization of dogs in combat by American Marines.

Caesar's Early Training

Caesar was a member of War Dog Combat Platoon No. 1, which was trained here and transferred to duty in the field the past spring. The platoon, commanded by Lieut. Clyde A. Henderson of Brecksville, Ohio, then consisted of 24 dogs and 55 enlisted men.

Caesar's handlers when the unit left Camp Lejeune were Privates First Class John J. Kleeman, 223 Champlost ave., Philadelphia, Pa., and Rufus G. Mayo, 106½ Monroe st., Montgomery, Ala.

The dog, described by Capt. Jackson H. Boyd, commanding officer of the War Dog Training Company as a fine German shepherd, is owned by Max Glazer of the Bronx, New York.

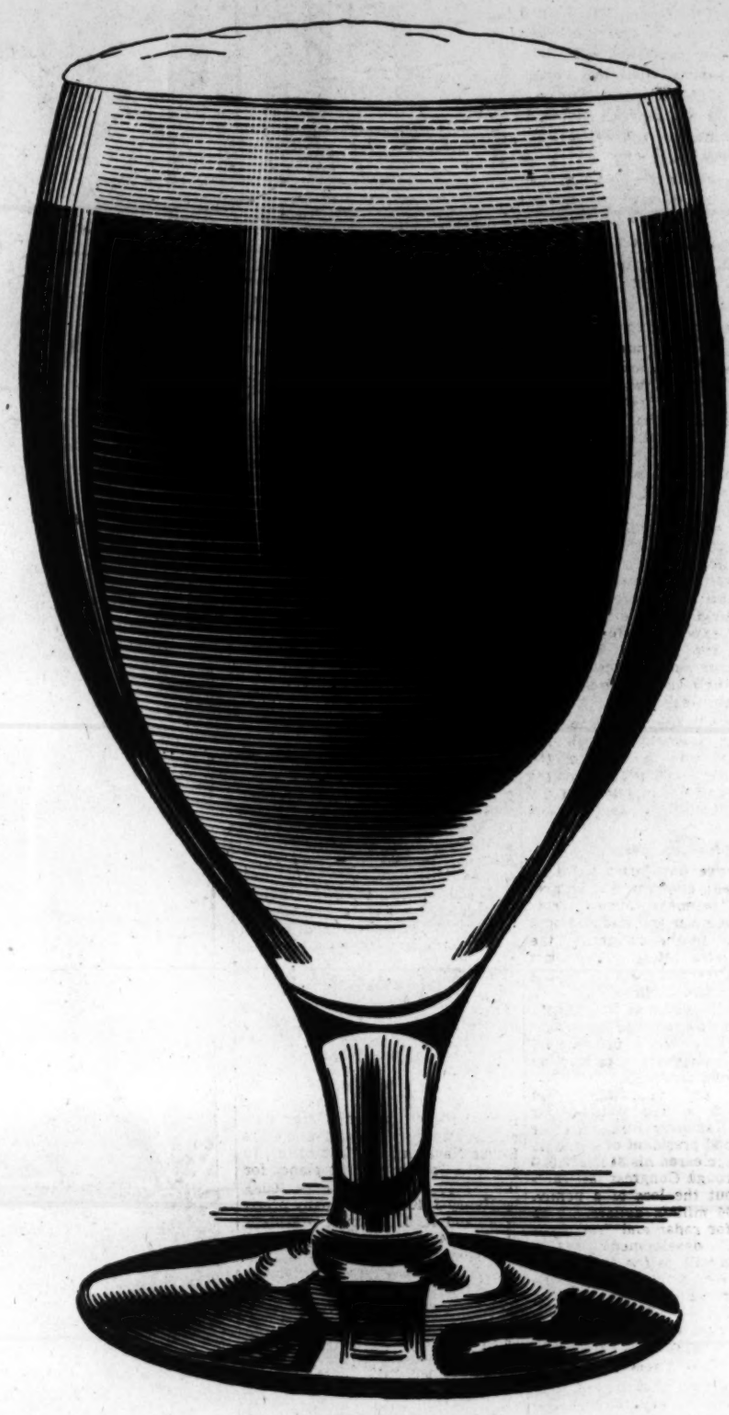
In addition to Caesar, the dogs attached to the platoon included two other German shepherds and 21 Doberman Pinschers, according to dispatches from Bougainville. Of the 24 dogs sent out with the platoon, Captain Boyd said, 20 participated in the landing. Four were replaced in the field.

Used In Scouting

The dogs are utilized in scouting, carrying messages to the rear and in first aid work. In scouting, they smell out enemy nests. They help locate wounded men who have crawled to cover.

Captain Boyd said Caesar had been trained as a messenger dog.

War Dog Combat Platoon No. 1, was the first unit sent out from the War Dog Training Company. It completed minor phases of training on the West Coast and in the field. Since its departure, the training program has been expanded. "Men and dogs now trained here," Captain Boyd said, "are completely prepared to go into battle."



We still make a good glass of beer!

In normal times, almost anybody can make a good beer. Today it's a lot harder to do.

Fine malt, hops and grain are tough to get. And to make it worse, there are a lot more people in town. The demand for beer has reached a point where there just isn't enough to go around. And there's a temptation to introduce short cuts.

Here at Arrow, we've avoided them.

We're going to keep on giving you a good, sound beer. It will continue to have that special goodness... that special taste that is definitely different in tang and flavor from other beers.

If you can get a glass of Arrow . . . try it!

OPA Prepares To Boost Coal Price 62 Cents

By Ben W. Gilbert

The Office of Price Administration yesterday asked the domestic consumer to pay 70 cents a ton more for the most commonly used sizes of hard coal—broken, egg, stove, chestnut, and pea—for the rest of the heating year.

With the approval of the Solid Fuels Administration and the Office of Economic Stabilization, OPA announced a new schedule of hard coal prices providing an average increase of 62 cents a ton until June 1, 1944, when the boost will drop to an average of 34 cents over present levels.

The price increase was occasioned by the increased cost of the wage agreement signed by Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes and UMW President John L. Lewis. A retroactive wage liability makes the higher increase necessary this year, OPA said.

No. 1 buckwheat coal was boosted 60 cents a ton, rice size coal 50 cents a ton, and barley size and smaller, 35 cents a ton.

Cut After June 1

After June 1, 1944, the common sizes will be reduced to 40 cents a ton above present levels, ranging down to 20 cents a ton above present levels for barley coal.

"It is apparent from a study of the financial condition of the anthracite industry and a comparison with earnings in previous years that these increased costs of production cannot be absorbed but must be passed on to the consumer in the form of higher prices," OPA said.

Anthracite coal ceilings at the mine per net ton follow:

Size of coal.	Present ceilings.	New ceilings.	New ceilings after June 1, 1944
Broken, egg, stove, chestnut	$7.30	$8.00	$7.70
Pea	5.75	6.45	6.15
Buckwheat No. 1	4.20	4.80	4.50
Rice	3.35	3.85	3.60
Barley	2.50	2.85	2.70
Smaller than barley	1.80	2.15	2.00

It was understood that OPA has different plans for the soft coal industry, expecting to ask the industry to absorb a portion of the increased cost because of their more favorable profits position. OPA, Office of Economic Stabilization, and Solid Fuels Administration.

OPA originally proposed a soft-coal boost averaging 15 cents a ton, and SFA countered with a proposal for a 25-cent average boost. A compromise 20-cents-a-ton increase to cover increased wage costs appeared likely.

Little Progress Made

Meanwhile, little progress was made in wage negotiations, with Southern Appalachian coal producers continuing to hold out against adopting the Ickes-Lewis agreement to govern private operations, thus facilitating return of the mines to their owners. Operators representing 50 per cent of the Nation's tonnage have agreed to sign the pact—a move which is acceptable to Lewis provided the rest of the industry comes along.

Lewis, it was understood, is unwilling to leave any large group of coal operators out of the agreement, permitting them to attack it before the War Labor Board.

During the day, Ickes sent telegrams to representatives of "captive" (steel company controlled) coal mines to join in the negotiations.

Saying that his attention had been called to their "absenteeism," Ickes stated:

"Your Government, through me, suggests, in the interest of the proper conduct of the war and of the welfare of your country, that your company be represented without loss of time."

Ickes added: "Time is of the essence."

Expects Improvement

Ickes also notified all Government coal mine managers that he expected an immediate improvement in the industry's safety record.

He ordered reestablished the health and safety division of the Coal Mines Administration under the direction of Dr. R. R. Sayers, head of the Bureau of Mines, and directed Sayers to "bear down hard on this problem and report immediately to me for appropriate action any case where carelessness and violation of regulations may jeopardize safety."

"There have been eight major mine disasters costing the lives of 174 men during the first 10 months of this year as compared to five with 120 fatalities during all of 1942," he said.

Rotarians Hosts At Thanksgiving Dinner for Clubs

The Rotary Club entertained Kiwanians at a Thanksgiving dinner yesterday at the Willard and 400 business men gathered about the tables for the annual event at which the two clubs alternate as hosts.

An unexpected Thanksgiving touch was given by Capt. Bradford Swope, USMCR, son of Dr. Chester Swope, past president of the Rotarians, and Lieut. Winfield C. Aub, son of Dr. Darrell Aub, a prominent member of the Kiwanis Club.

Both said, in almost identical words, that it had taken the war to teach them what Thanksgiving means.

Eugene G. Adams, charter member and second president of the Kiwanis Club, another of the speakers, described the trials of the Pilgrims comparing their hardships with those of today to the advantage of the present.

Marcy L. Sperry, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., past treasurer of the Rotary Club, spoke briefly.

Nazis Boast 'Secret Weapons,' But U. S. Really Builds Them

OSRD Has Produced At Least 200 So Far Since War Began

By Walter Wood

A. Hitler & Co. may boast of rocket guns and the like, but place your bottom dollar on American scientists beating the Nazis to the draw when it comes to secret weapons.

The Office of Scientific Research and Development — the United States Government agency charged with pioneering Army and Navy secret weapons—disclosed yesterday that 7500 scientists and engineers are working on new devices, instruments and weapons for winning the war.

The OSRD, it was learned, has entered into 1700 development contracts with 250 industrial organizations and 119 colleges and universities and so far in this war has produced at least 200 unpublicized weapons and secret modifications to military equipment.

"Thrives on Anonymity"

OSRD's small headquarters staff operates, as few Washingtonians know, in the Carnegie Institution of Washington in the 1500 block of P st. nw. Its activities are necessarily clothed in secrecy and in the words of one OSRD official, it "thrives on anonymity."

One OSRD weapon, no longer secret but very much in evidence on many fronts, is the "Duck," the Army's amphibious 2½-ton truck.

A spokesman revealed that to develop this sea-going wagon, the OSRD brought together the yacht-designing experts of Sparkman & Stephens, Inc., of New York, and the scientists and engineers of the Yellow Truck and Coach Division of General Motors.

Sparkman & Stephens, who built the racing hulls for Sir Thomas Lipton, designed the body of the Duck and Yellow Truck constructed the chassis with components of the standard Army 2½-ton, 6 by 6 truck.

No-Profit, No-Loss Basis

Forty-three days after the first development contract was signed, the Duck serenely floated across the Detroit River and waddled up a river bank to the delight of the Quartermaster Motor Transport Subcommittee at the proving grounds, Milford, Mich.

All OSRD contracts are negotiated on a no-profit, no-loss basis, on the theory that a firm should make its money from production and not from research.

Finding and financing secret weapons is a 135-million-dollar job. Dr. Vannevar Bush, director of OSRD and president of Carnegie Institution, cleared his $135,982,500 budget through Congress last summer without the loss of a penny.

About 64 million dollars are to be spent for radar and "radio coordination" development; nearly 20 millions will go for antisubmarine warfare; more than 11 millions for origination of "special projectiles"; 7 millions for ordnance accessories and 4 millions each to fire control and explosives.

Scientists Prove Themselves

Dr. Bush says that in the past year Army and Navy officers have gotten a somewhat different idea of the scientists of the country. They have found, according to Dr. Bush, that the scientist is not necessarily a person with "long hair," but that he can attack a problem in a practical way and that he can work long hours and take it with the best."

The OSRD has two major divisions:

1. The National Defense Research Committee, under supervision of Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, concerned with work on weapons.

2. The newly formed Committee on Medical Research, headed by Dr. A. Newton Richards, eminent pharmacologist of Pennsylvania, busy with advanced problems of military medicine.

The medical half of OSRD, it was said, has more than 300 research contracts for solving many problems—from the mass production of the wonder drug, penicillin, to developments and testing methods of repelling sharks, barracuda and jelly fish.

Goes in For Medicine, Too

Studies in aviation medicine occupy an important part of its program.

Practically everything that OSRD does is highly secret. Secret matters are held carefully in "compartments." This means that one scientist does not know how the work he is doing fits in with that of another and no member within the organization will learn of secret matters, except "to the extent that is necessary for his appropriate functioning in the particular position which he occupies." Knowledge of especially secret matters is restricted to very small groups within OSRD.

This puts the independent inventor at a disadvantage. Generally, he can not be told whether his idea is new, whether the OSRD considers it valuable, or whether it is being used.

The National Inventors Council aids the OSRD by evaluating the many "super ideas" coming from the public. Theirs is the job of "sifting the wheat from the chaff" and passing it on for development as needs arise, Dr. Bush said.

Officials Warn D. C. Real Estate Tax Delinquents

Property owners delinquent in payment of real estate taxes due September, 1942, and March, 1943, will have their properties advertised December 7 and 14, if they have not paid up by that time Assessor Edward A. Dent said last night.

Although several hundred have been coming to the office each day, he said several thousand still are in arrears.

Tax sales will be held January 14 when tax buyers may purchase certificates entitling them to 1 per cent a month on the investments should the owner decide to redeem his property within the two years allotted. If property is not redeemed, the tax buyer may apply for the deed.

In addition to 1 per cent a month, delinquent tax payers will have to pay the 50 cents advertising charge if they redeem their property.

UAW Head Has Confidence In De Lorenzo

New York, Nov. 24.—Complete confidence in the ability of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., currently under investigation by the House Naval Affairs Committee, to produce Corsair fighting planes for the Navy, was voiced here today by Henry J. Kaiser, company president, and R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, with which the Brewster labor union is affiliated.

R. J. Thomas came to the defense of Thomas Vincent de Lorenzo, president of Brewster Local 365, who admitted under questioning before the Naval Affairs Committee that he had used a string of aliases and had made false statements in Government records.

Your Daily Health Quiz

How Many Quarts of Blood Has the Average Person?

It is an accepted fact that normally we have 5 to 5½ quarts of blood.

Although our blood constitutes about 1/12 of our body weight, most folks pay no attention to it whatsoever. When they feel tired or under the weather, they always blame it on something else. Actually, at the first sign of fatigue, lack of energy, strength, or when you feel yourself slipping physically, check up on your blood right away.

You know, if your blood is thin, pale and watery, and unable to feed the hungry tissues with life-giving oxygen, sickness and disorders set in more quickly. But if blood is rich and pure, it contains chemical substances and cells capable of repairing damaged body tissues and replenishing our strength and energy.

So don't take chances. Do something about your blood today. Get a bottle of Boncquet (pronounced Bon-Kay) Tablets. Here is an amazing new discovery, by an eminent biochemist, that is designed to build rich red fighting blood. It contains, in concentrated quantities, the raw materials so woefully lacking in the modern diet, and so urgently needed by the body tissues . . . the most important being the active principle of raw liver (the red blood cell maturing factor), organic vegetable iron and other minerals, vitamin B complex, fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G, and assimilable calcium and phosphorus. This "liver principle" is sometimes called anti-anemic substance.

Try a bottle of Boncquet Tablets. If you wish, have your blood count taken by your physician before and after this test. If you don't feel better, look better, and have general all-around improvement . . . and most of all, show a marked increase in your red blood cell count . . . your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Parliament Convenes; Attlee Appears for Churchill

By William Smith White

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—In a quiet, austere ceremony heavy with a sense of history, King George VI opened a new session of Parliament today—a session that may well be sitting when the European war's crisis has come and gone—and Prime Minister Churchill's government came through the first day of debate without serious challenge.

The Prime Minister himself was not there to raise his voice.

Maj. Clement P. Attlee, deputy Prime Minister, acted for his absent chief and gave a generally optimistic review of the military situation. In answer to the chief complaint of the government critics—Allied loss of the islands of Cos, Leros and Samos—Attlee said, "The loss of brave men and strategic positions of value are grievous." He added, however, that the risks of attempting to hold the islands had been understood from the start and that in any event, the German victories there cost heavily in Nazi lives and equipment.

Much of Attlee's address was devoted to general explanations of the government's plan to bring into force guarantees, which the King had declared in his message should be given for "food, homes and employment . . . for my people" in the transition period immediately after the war.

The monarch's voice softened as he used that phrase this morning in the little, former royal robing room which the House of Lords now uses as its wartime home.

He entered with Queen Elizabeth and confidently told Parliament that the Allies had "assumed the offensive in all theaters . . . and in the coming year we shall, with God's help, be able to bear upon the enemy a still greater weight of attack."

Doomsday

None of us living in the remote security of this land can picture adequately the ordeal to which the people of Berlin nave been subjected during thi. past week. Some portion of the horror is made real to us in statistics: it is said that more than 5000 tons of bombs were dropped in the city in the Thursday, Monday and Tuesday night raids; one estimate placed casualties as high as 25,000; to flyers, whole sections of the sprawling metropolis seemed engulfed in flames. But the terror of living through those nights, the shock and anguish of those who count the dead and view the wreckage, the dreadful waiting for a recurrence of the blow, are emotions at which we can only guess.

One can justify such warfare only on the ground that it is necessary, that it will, in the long run, if it is waged effectively, save human lives and suffering. We can take satisfaction in the power of the weapon which we and our Allies have forged; the ruthless wielding of it brings closer the day of victory and peace and reconstruction. But there should be no place in our minds for exultation over the havoc we have wreaked. Some day, for our own sakes, we shall have to help bind up these wounds we have inflicted.

It may be that the German people will learn from this sort of warfare something which their brief history as a nation has never taught them. During the past three-quarters of a century they have crossed their borders three times to bring fire and destruction to their neighbors. But their own homes have been free from the ravages of war. It is perhaps not unreasonable to hope that the people of Berlin will not soon again believe leaders who glorify war as the noblest pursuit of man. They can see it now in all its ugliness and pain and ignobility. Berlin is writing in flame a lesson for men everywhere. If we do not manage to live in peace, we shall manage our own extinction as a species.

Why So Little?

Yesterday's debate on the two-billion-dollar tax bill was enlivened, although not illumined, by predictions as to the dire effect of trying to raise 10½ billions in taxes, as recommended by the Treasury. Chairman Doughton, speaking for the majority members of the Ways and Means Committee, declared that "too heavy a tax burden is as great a danger to the Nation's economy as too large a public debt." Representative Knutson, spokesman for the Republican members of the committee, said that an additional tax burden of 10½ billion would "liquidate the great middle class" . . . "threaten the future solvency of all business, imperil savings and jeopardize the postwar continuance of private enterprise."

One can only wonder how these prophets of doom account for the fact that the people of this country are piling up savings at a breath-taking rate of accumulation in spite of heavy taxes. The most recent testimony to that effect comes from the SEC's regular quarterly report on savings. During three months—from July 1 to October 1—the SEC estimates that the liquid savings of individuals reached a new high for the year of 9.9 billion dollars. Corporations, exclusive of banks and insurance companies, added three billion dollars to their holdings of cash and Government securities during the same three months. If the third-quarter savings record is maintained during the final quarter, individual savings for the year 1943 will reach the stupendous figure of 38 billion dollars compared with slightly less than 30 billion dollars in 1942, while corporate savings in the form of cash and Government securities will amount to 12 billion dollars. Surely an economy that can show savings of 50 billions in a single year would not collapse if the public were called upon to transfer an additional 10½ billions to the tax collector.

Of course, a tax program of such magnitude would have to be carefully planned to avoid doing needless harm to the economy. For instance, a large proportion of corporate savings are capital reserves that will be greatly needed later on to meet the demands of the postwar period. Hence it would show poor judgment to tax away such accumulations. However, the figures for individual savings provide convincing evidence that the people of this country are taxed far below their taxable capacity. Otherwise how could they be increasing their holdings of currency and bank deposits, buying Government bonds and other securities, paying off indebtedness, and contributing to insurance reserves at the rate of nearly 10 billion dollars every three months? The people in the upper-income brackets are already taxed so heavily that they are not doing much of this saving. Most of it is being done by the people earning less than $5000 yearly who, Secretary Morgenthau says, receive four-fifths of the Nation's income. In the light of SEC estimates of savings, the Ways and Means Committee should have given the Treasury a good deal more than it requested instead of offering to settle for one-fifth of its demands.

It Is A Good Thing—

It is said that the French love to possess but not to acquire, while the American loves to acquire but not to possess. The American has acquired much. In his three hundred years of life on this continent he has acquired a living standard without equal in the world's history. Yet from the earliest days he has never forgotten to "give thanks unto the Lord." Today is the particular day which has been set apart for our Thanksgiving. The national memory will go back to the time when the early settlers in New England fell on their knees in gratitude for the miracle of corn. That was only the beginning of God's bounty. It has endowed every succeeding generation of Americans with many and diverse forms of human sustenance. Yet the humbling experience of saying grace for the fullness of our good earth remains an integument of the American psyche.

We give thanks today for the miracle which allows us so much corn when so much of our energy is absorbed by the need to turn out implements of war. No less than 70 per cent of industrial production is now for war purposes. The arsenal is full to overflowing, and has piled up so fast that even the economists are astonished. Yet even more amazing is the fact that we are able almost to maintain our living standards undiminished. To be sure, there are some inconveniences to cope with. There is less meat to eat, much of the fare at the festive board is rationed, but, by and large, the discomforts of wartime life in America add up only to sand in the shoe. Americans today are among the few people on God's earth who are not suffering real deprivation. Where else can there be found such plentiful food, or an index of retail sales which actually registers an increase over sales of last year? In very few countries. Thus in spite of the preeminence of the sword over the plowshare, there will be no lack of scope for the trencherman on today's Thanksgiving board.

But it is more than meet today to give thanks for other things besides the horn of plenty. In the last twelve months a mighty Providence has been the shield and buckler of our arms. Last Thanksgiving there was the turn of the tide at Stalingrad to rejoice over. That was done by our Russian Allies in the greatest mass feat of valor to be accomplished in this storied war. Our own soldiers had already begun to shed their blood in the common cause in the battlefields washed by the Atlantic Ocean. But the trial had as yet been indecisive. In the succeeding 12 months our American soldiers have been tested and found worthy in some of the war's hottest fighting. Everywhere they have measured up to the demands of modern war. What they have done has been crowned with success in Africa and in Italy, and now, along with their comrades-in-arms of a dozen nationalities, they stand poised for the grand assault. The air this Thanksgiving is electric with expectation of the last grapple with Hitlerism. Yet, with so much done, the end is in sight, and the only question is the time table. For what we have accomplished already on the road to triumph we are, indeed, thankful.

The Psalmist says it is a good thing to give thanks by feasting. There has been no lack of gusto in our gratitude even in the days of the early theocracy of New England. The hairshirt has never been part of the American scene. But, if our portion is never taken sadly, surely we cannot be condemned for selfishness. We have acquired much, but we have shared much. This characteristic is all of a piece with our history. In 1922 Jamestown was far from being in a happy or secure position, but when its inhabitants heard that other new Americans had landed at Plymouth, and were in desperate need, they dispatched a vessel with food and seed corn to help the strangers who also were following the dream and engaging in the great adventure of America. Evidently the Levite never landed on the American shore. If there has been an opulence in our abundant life, there has likewise been a lavish hospitality. Soon there will be need to remember the story of the two pioneer communities. On the morrow of victory a ravaged world will look to more fortunate lands for the means wherewith to put them again in the way of earning a living. The conference at Atlantic City is engaged in setting up the organization for this purpose. All that the liberated people will need, aside from immediate relief, is help to do their own rooting, as we say in America. The goodness of Almighty God can be redeemed only by what we do for our fellow men.

Tax-Exempt Land

The clear implication of the Byrd report is that, considering the enormous area that it has removed from District tax rolls, the Federal Government has been very niggardly in its treatment of the District. In the 10-year period from 1928 to 1937 the average annual aid to the District, excluding relief and unemployment benefits, amounted to $7,900,000. District tax rates applied to Federal real estate here would have brought in $10,569,981. The District was at the bottom of the list of States in the percentage of Federal aid received in relation to the fair market value of Federal real estate for which local protection and service was provided. Indiana received aid from the Federal Government over this 10-year period equal to more than 75 per cent of the value of Federal real estate in that State. Federal aid granted to several other States in that decade amounted to more than half of the value of Federal holdings in their boundaries. But Federal aid to the District amounted to only 1.5 per cent of the fair market value of Federal holdings here. This is clear-cut evidence of discrimination against this voteless community.

Patton's Future

The justification which has been adduced for keeping General Patton in his present command seems to arise from a perverted sense of values. He is supposed to be an able general. As to this, we have no knowledge, and for some time have felt that no judgment can be formed about our field generalship because of the prevailing censorship. All that the reader knows about our field generals is what he is told in the buildup stories that fill the magazines. But this we know—that, whatever his record, Patton can no longer be regarded as fit to be a field general. Conduct which General Eisenhower scored himself as despicable must have completely undermined Patton's leadership. For it was known throughout his army, and repeated by returning travelers, long before Mr. Drew Pearson had the temerity to relay it to his domestic audience.

The deleterious effect of this incident upon Patton's leadership of a citizen army must have been compounded rather than mitigated by his enforced apologies. It seems to us inevitable that the reaction must have been a sense of injustice over the inequality with which militray law is meted out. A captain who assaulted a lieutenant in public would have got a court-martial. So would an enlisted man, and fortunate the private who would have escaped without being either shot or incarcerated for a term of years. The higher the rank, the more heinous the sin. Yet General Patton merely got a dressing down, and all manner of devices were used to safeguard his standing at home—from requests to the correspondents to keep quiet to a disingenuous denial of the incident when Mr. Pearson acquainted the American people with facts that were common knowledge throughout General Eisenhower's command. Then there was the extraordinary silence before Congress. Patton was about to be promoted, as to his permanent rank, from colonel to major general, and yet the incident seems to have been kept out of Patton's record, while there was no withdrawal on the War Department's part of this unique promotion.

A leader can command loyalty only if he gives an example of self-control and understanding. These qualities are fundamental in leading men on a battlefield whence they may never return. It has been well said that no man can control others who cannot control himself. General Patton in the presence of the entire Army has shown himself to be congenitally unable to control himself. Put his case down charitably to shell shock or battle neurosis, and the case against him as a field commander remains unchanged. But to lack of self-control Patton has joined a complete lack of understanding of free men under fire. As is shown by the application of psychiatric tests to selectees, men can and do suffer shocks which are not registered on the body and which must be cured by medical treatment equally with physical wounds. Certainly they do not lend themselves to the Patton therapy.

Now, with the publication of the Patton story, the general will have lost the confidence of his country as well as of his army. There has been such a lack of proper values in the handling of the incident that the War Department needs to be reminded of this result. It is idle to talk of Patton's services in the field. The point is that he is no longer an asset, if he ever was, but a decided liability. The American people may or may not have been amused by the silver-handled pistols, the belching cigars and the furious epithets and whirlwind movements of "Old Blood and Guts." But when they see that the paraphernalia hasn't back of it the self-control and understanding prerequisite to a general, they are bound to be outraged. There are mothers' sons in Patton's army. Those mothers' sons are members of a citizen army, not mercenaries, and the reminder is likely to be quickly forthcoming unless the War Department bestirs itself.

The problem is no longer one of General Patton's skin. It's a problem of the standing of the War Department with the citizenry—whether it is a club or a national organization. There cannot be two codes in a citizen's army. Patton from now on is a marked man, and if ever he suffers a defeat, the finger will be pointed not at him but at the War Department for letting him remain at the head of the army after his leadership has been forfeit. The War Department could recoup some of the maladroitness in the handling of this incident by transferring Patton to staff work. He should handle plans, not men.

BRIEF SONG FOR LOVE

Broken now the arrows
of the heart's fear and anger.
Like chaff blown off, the sorrows, undone the hunger.

With the cruel blade plowing, the plowman turns the fallow to full yield, the yellow to green, to blossom snowing.
Here once marked so stonily,
hostile fields no longer,
bless plowman, lover, singer—no man shall come here enemy and none a stranger.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Americans All

VERY FEW AMERICANS realize the part that our racial minorities are playing in the actual fighting of this war. If we did, we might display more tolerance.

Up in York, Pa., last week, Negro Sergt. Lewis Woodyard returned home after six months of service on Amchitka, in the Aleutians. He had been cited for bravery, and shortly after his forty-sixth birthday had received an honorable discharge because he had developed a rheumatic condition from constant outdoor work in the wet Aleutian climate.

Woodyard got off the train in his home town at 4 a. m. Not wanting to disturb his relatives at that hour, he went to police headquarters to get a voucher entitling him to USO lodgings. Not only was he turned down, but he was told that he could not rest on one of the benches of the police station until morning.

Negroes have acquitted themselves well in this war wherever they have had a chance. There were Dorie Miller, the Negro messman on the Arizona, who was decorated for bravery at Pearl Harbor; William Pinckney of Beaufort, S. C., cook on the carrier Enterprise, who was awarded the Navy Cross for saving a shipmate's life in the battle of Santa Cruz; the three southern Negroes who were decorated by General MacArthur for swimming through burning gasoline to save an American flier who had crashed into a river in New Guinea, and many an unsung hero in the Negro Engineers on New Guinea and in Africa.

Racial Minorities

Less is known about our other racial minorities, but they are in there fighting, too. Thinly settled New Mexico lost 1300 boys in the Philippine campaign, and three-fourths of these were of Spanish-American or Indian blood. Some 400 boys from Albuquerque alone were lost on Bataan. Death notices have been received for more than 100 of them, but 300 are still listed as missing.

Mexican-Americans from Texas, most of them from the El Paso area, were among the first Americans to land at Salerno. A Reuters dispatch from North Africa last week labeled them "some of the finest fighters in the Fifth Army."

On the first day of the fighting around Salerno, Pvt. Raymond Gutierez won the Silver Star for knocking out an enemy machine gun nest. He was automatic rifleman with a squad which was attacked by five German tanks a short distance from the beach. After being wounded in an exchange of shots with the tanks, Gutierez spotted a machine gun emplacement behind them. Armed with only a hand grenade and a knife, he wormed his way past the tanks in the face of heavy fire and put the enemy gun and three or four Nazis out of action with his grenade. Jumping into the nest, he killed the remaining German with his knife.

Several other Mexican-Americans were cited for bravery or recommended for promotion because of their gallant acts.

American-Born Japanese

American-born Japanese soldiers have also distinguished themselves in Italy, as if to confound those American racists who hold that "A Jap's a Jap." East of Naples a detachment of them was under constant fire for four days last month. Finally they broke through the German line and entered the town of Benevento to rescue 22 American paratroopers who had been behind enemy lines for more than two weeks.

A recent article in the London Daily Sketch by War Correspondent Leonard Mosley said that the Germans had grown to fear the Japanese-Americans, whom they call "yellow devils." Mosley told how a German sentry in Italy had been knocked out and taken behind the American lines. When he awakened he found himself gaizng up into the face of a Japanese-American soldier.

"I thought the Japanese were our comrades," said the Nazi soldier. "Why have you made me prisoner?"

The American replied, "We are not Japanese, you know. We are Japanese-Americans and as much your enemy as any other Yankee."

The British writer said that one of the Japanese-American soldiers told him, "I suppose you think it curious that we should be fighting against the Axis when Japan is Germany's ally. But we consider ourselves Americans and not Japanese. Our parents came from Japan but many of us have never seen it—and do not want to. We regard the United States as our homeland."

Tokyo has its own explanation for Japanese-American participation in the war. A recent Domei news agency dispatch beamed to the Americas, recorded by U. S. Government monitors, said that reports of Japanese fighting in the American forces in Italy and the Southwest Pacific were merely "confessions on the part of Washington that the United States troops refuse to bear the brunt of battle when the fighting is intense."

The Japanese — like some Americans—apparently find it hard to realize that people of Japanese blood may voluntarily fight for the United States.

Bombed Berlin

By Barnet Nover

Allied Air Offensive: New Phase

BEFORE LAST THURSDAY'S raid, Berlin had been bombed just under 90 times and altogether an estimated total of 7500 tons of explosives and incendiaries had been dropped on the German capital.

The destruction wrought by these earlier raids is not to be minimized. Berlin had, to be sure, suffered very much less from Allied bombing than had Hamburg, Cologne, Duesseldorf, Essen and other cities of west Germany. Some 600 miles from the nearest enemy airfields in Great Britain, Berlin has had the advantage of being almost at the extreme range of effective bombing power.

However, as the total of the weight of bombs dropped before Thursday indicates, Berlin had not gone unscathed. It was, according to eyewitness accounts, a city of smashed buildings, ruined streets, hollow-eyed individuals who during the periods of lull between bombings could only wonder when lightning would strike their city again. And this dread grew apace after Hamburg was completely laid waste last summer.

THE RAIDS on Berlin that have occurred since last Thursday strongly suggest that the fate of Hamburg is now to be the fate of Germany's largest city as well.

On Thursday 1500 tons of bombs were dropped on Berlin. This, for the Berliners, was bad enough. What followed was worse.

On Monday, Thursday's bombload was almost doubled, the estimated 750 heavy bombers of the R. A. F. dropping a total of 2300 tons of bombs on Berlin at the fantastic rate of 77 tons a minute. The next day Berlin was raided again, once more in what the Air Minister calls "great force."

Thus in just three raids the bombs dropped on Berlin were equal in weight to possibly three-fourths of all the bombs dropped on that city from the beginning of the war up until last week. It is a difference of degree which makes a real difference in kind. The attack on Berlin probably marks the beginning of a new phase in the aerial assault on Hitler's roofless fortress.

IT IS EVIDENT that if huge aerial armadas, running into many hundreds of planes, can regularly attack Berlin and do it, as the relatively light losses suffered by the R. A. F. on Thursday, Monday and Tuesday nights indicate, with relative impunity, every city in Germany, no matter how remote, may suffer the fate of Hamburg.

In other words, the Germans are now under direct notice that what happened to Hamburg was no tour de force, no special visitation, but what is likely to become the norm in Allied aerial effectiveness from now on. And since the Germans cannot be sure which city will be the next on the list Germany's already badly strained defenses against bombing will from now on have to be spread even thinner.

WHILE an important consequence of the three destructive raids on Berlin and the others that are likely to follow, this is not the only result of the resumed Allied bombing offensive on the Reich.

Berlin itself occupies a place of very special importance in the German scheme of things.

In the first place, it is one of the most important industrial centers in the Reich, producing electrical equipment, machine tools, airplanes and airplane parts, chemicals, cables, specialized instruments, pharmaceuticals, parachutes, rolling mill equipment and hundreds of other articles. There are 25 aircraft plants within Berlin's confines, 55 machinery and armaments plants, 21 power stations, gas works and water works.

SECONDLY, Berlin is one of Germany's most important transportation centers, if not the most important. It is the hub of an elaborate network of railways and is second only to much-bombed Duisberg as an inland port. One of its five marshaling yards, that of Schoeneberg, is alone capable of handling 4000 cars per day.

Thirdly, Berlin is the political and administrative center of the Reich. Even though many agencies, bureaus and departments of the government have been moved out of Berlin during recent months, a very large part of the Nazi regime's business has continued to be transacted in Berlin. The continued bombing of that city on the scale of the past week's raids is certain to produce a considerable measure of confusion in day-to-day operations of government which means as well production of war material and their distribution.

FINALLY the Berlin raids are significant because they come at a time when their effect on German morale is likely to prove most shattering.

When Hamburg was destroyed the homeless population of that city did not, at least, have to worry about the weather. It was then midsummer. The blitzed population of Berlin will lack that advantage. Winter is on the way, and it is likely to be the grimmest winter of all for the Herrenvolk.

Undisciplined General

General Patton's action in thoughtlessly and cruelly striking a soldier suffering from nervous shock gives every wife, mother, sweetheart and relative a feeling of terror for the welfare of their men in the service. Not one blow did General Patton strike, but three. This is unthinkable conduct on the part of a general of the United States Army.

We are all concerned over the welfare of our servicemen. We have a gnawing fear that some may not return.

What do you think General Patton's action does to the privates and noncoms of our Army? I can think of no better way of breaking the morale of our Army than to mistreat the soldiers in the lower ranks who win our battles for us.

WIFE OF A BUCK PRIVATE.
Washington, Nov. 23.

Your issue of this morning contains account of an alleged assault upon an enlisted man in a hospital bed by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.

The source of the charge and the standing of congressional leaders who are stated to favor its investigation tend to suggest that it needs investigation. If Army censorship has prevented full press accounts of the case, that is another positive indication that it badly needs full publicity. If thorough investigation would serve to vindicate General Patton he should be clamoring for it—and the Army also—unless vindication requires the manufacture of evidence, or the liquidation of the victim, or his supporting evidence. Delay favors General Patton and should be terminated. Investigation should be prompt, thorough, and nonpartisan—reliance should not be placed upon an Army report of the affair.

Millions of American citizens have been deprived of nearly all individual liberty by induction into the Army. Even more millions of American men and women in civilian life have been deprived of one liberty after another—all in the name of the Four—and more—Freedoms and of democracy. These liberties have been surrendered too easily; there are many indications that they will not be as easily regained.

One of these indications is that those alleged to be responsible for the Pearl Harbor debacle have not yet been brought to trial—suggesting the possibility that such trial would place the real guilt, or incompetence, elsewhere. Another indication is the apparent shielding of General Patton from an investigation of this charge—implying that the charge cannot be successfully defended, except by ignoring it, or by awaiting demise of the evidence.

If an enlisted man loses, with his liberties, all right to our vaunted "Equal Justice Under Law." If, even when wounded or otherwise disabled, he has no rights which effectively protect him from violent attack at the hands of a general or other commissioned officer in the mood for attack, why under the sun are we fighting against Germany and Japan? Isn't that also their creed?

DAVID DARRIN.
Washington, Nov. 23.

Teen-Age Ethics

It has been recently suggested as a remedial measure in checking juvenile delinquency that a book of laws pertaining to the teen-age be printed expressly for study in the public school system.

I wonder if it has ever occurred to those who offer this suggestion that the basis of all law is the moral law and until children are taught something of the moral law there can be no assurance that they will have any further regard for any civil law.

God also has rights. He has given us laws and commandments which are the principal fundamentals of good citizenship. And when His law and religion are given a rightful place in the education of our children—then and then only will there be a hope for the future of young America.

M. JENNINGS.

Wild Inflation

If a man cannot go to Washington as a representative of his constituents as a whole, instead of falling for the wiles and threats of pressure groups . . . then he is not fit to be a public officer. The American people deserve a better deal than they now are promised by the crowd that appears to be running full tilt for the wildest kind of inflation.

What potent club are the farm groups and the laborites holding over the heads of the politicians down there? Haven't they brains enough to know that no pressure group can be stronger than the American people in the mass?

No More Work Clothes

There just isn't any work clothes in the country at all. The OPA ceiling price was so low all manufacturers quit making any at all, such as men's and boys' overalls, coveralls, work shirts and pants. You can get plenty of dress clothes, but no work clothes.

Belgian Church

Fights Nazis

THE ATTITUDE of the Catholic clergy toward the Nazi forces and the local collaborationists is of tremendous importance in those occupied countries whose populations are largely Catholic. This is the case of Belgium, where Catholic priests have been in the forefront of the resistance to the invader, inspiring and strengthening the Belgians in their struggle against the Germans.

This attitude has been maintained in spite of the attempt of Leon Degrelle, leader of Belgium's Rexist Nazi Party, to give his group the appearance of a Catholic rejuvenation movement. Its name comes from its slogan, "Christus Rex," but the Belgian clergy never allowed themselves to be deceived into lending the protection of their moral support to the Rexists. Even before the war, when Degrelle ran against former Premier Paul Van Zeeland for a seat in the Chamber of Deputies, his defeat was made certain when Cardinal Van Roey and the Catholic Party came out against him.

Since the occupation of Belgium, the Germans have found Catholic priests opposing them with the same consistency with which they repudiated Degrelle. German Military Governor of Belgium General Reeder recently vented his indignation concerning the pastoral letters of Cardinal Van Roey in a public speech.

Pastoral Letters

"These letters," said the German commander, "which are issued on the pretext of calming the population, have, in fact, the effect of provoking revolts among the people, and are at the bottom of many thoughtless and dangerous actions. They have the same effect as badly prepared medicine."

Another accusation made by General Reeder against the Catholic priests is that they have encouraged young men to evade the labor draft. It is a fact, certainly, that the great majority of the students at the Catholic University of Louvain refused to perform the obligatory six months labor service demanded of them. As a result, the rector of the university was arrested and sentenced to 18 months in prison.

Belgian bishops agreed that they would not perform requiem masses for men killed while fighting on the Russian front with the German army, and that they would not administer communion to wearers of the German uniform of Degrelle's anti-Bolshevik troops. Incidents caused by attempts of the Rexists to break these rulings have occurred in churches throughout Belgium, but the most disgraceful was precipitated by Degrelle himself.

Wearing the uniform of a German lieutenant, his hair cut in imitation of Hitler's, Degrelle stamped with his iron-nailed Wehrmacht boots into the church of the little town of Bouillon. He took a place, and everyone in the vicinity immediately moved away from him, leaving him kneeling in a sort of self-created vacuum.

When the time came for the administering of communion, he went to the rail with the others—but the priest passed him by, giving the holy wafer to those on either side of him. Furious, Degrelle interrupted the ceremony and demanded an explanation. The priest said he had instructions from his hierarchic superiors not to give communion to wearers of his uniform.

German Gestapo

Roaring with anger, Degrelle leaped at the priest and began pummeling him. The horrified worshipers pulled him away and threw him out of the church, where German Gestapo agents protected him from the angry mob. As a result, the Bishop of Namur announced Degrelle's excommunication, and his edict to that effect was read in every church of the diocese.

This is only one of the many incidents which have marked the part of the Belgian Catholic Church in the struggle against the Nazis both German and Belgian. Canon von Fuerstenburg, a Belgian priest of German origin, was condemned to two years imprisonment, when it was discovered that the Latin inscription spiraling up the Pascal candle in the cathedral of Mechlin could be interpreted as a condemnation of Nazism.

Reverend Father Magnee, prefect of the Jesuit college at Charleroi, was sent to the dread Dachau concentration camp for having disciplined a young Rexist student at the college for bringing in anti-British drawings. He died there last summer, because of privation and maltreatment, according to the Belgian underground.

Many other Belgian priests have been arrested for various offenses, such as advising peasants not to deliver their produce to the German-controlled organizations which collected it. Several monks were imprisoned when it was discovered that young men evading forced labor service for the Germans were being hidden in monasteries.

And one thing that most people who have heard of the famous Belgian underground paper, La Libre Belgique, do not know, is that it is a Catholic paper. At the outbreak of this war, it ducked underground again, and today, in occupied Belgium, La Libre Belgique continues to give forbidden news regularly to the Belgian people.

Today And Tomorrow

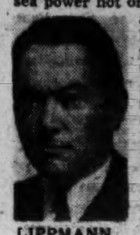
A New Light On The Japanese War



LIPPMANN

THE ATTACK on the Gilbert Islands is an historic event. It marks the recovery of American sea power not only from the disaster at Pearl Harbor but from the deterioration which began in 1922 with the Washington Conference. Pearl Harbor, where the main battleship force was knocked out in a few hours, was spectacular and humiliating. But in retrospect it is now evident that the effects of the Washington Conference were far more serious.

Only now, after two years of prodigious effort, are we in a position to begin to overcome the consequences by what is almost certain to be a long, bitter, and bloody campaign.

AT LEAST three capital errors of national policy were inaugurated at the Washington Conference. We arrested the technical and tactical development of our sea power by limitations of types and of funds. As a result, less than 20 years later we had an obsolescent Navy which was unprepared, even if it had not been paralyzed at Pearl Harbor, to wage war under modern conditions. In these past two years we have had to do much more than repair the damage we sustained at Pearl Harbor. We have had to perform the industrial and technological miracle of reconstructing our sea power.

The Washington Conference also destroyed the strategic foundations of American sea power when President Harding surrendered the right to improve the fortification of Guam and of the Philippine Islands. That decision made it impossible for General MacArthur to hold the Philippines until the fleet could fight its way across the Pacific to Manila.

Finally, the Washington Conference ruptured the naval partnership with Great Britain, and set up instead a rivalry by which we fell into the abysmal folly of thinking that to weaken the British navy was somehow to strengthen our own position.

Thus, with our Navy unprepared, our strategic position undermined, and with our principal ally weakened, we challenged the expansion of Japan though we appeased her while she was making ready for the showdown.

IN CONSEQUENCE when the showdown came, we were unable to do what the Pacific Fleet was built to do: we were unable to cross the Pacific, to reinforce the Philippines, and then to compel the Japanese fleet to fight a decisive battle or let Japan be blockaded. The disaster at Pearl Harbor, the inherent weakness of the fleet, the unfortified condition of Guam and the Philippines, have meant that we had to fall back upon Australia, New Zealand, and upon British and French islands, fighting a defensive holding action from allied territory while we recreated our sea power.

IT HAS OFTEN been argued by politicians, and even by some military men, that if it had not been for the decision to attack Hitler first, we could have knocked out Japan much sooner. Even if this contention is true, the decision was undoubtedly correct. For otherwise the European war might have become a stalemate, leaving us to fight Japan alone without prospect of reinforcement by either of our powerful allies.

But now that the navy has launched its great campaign in the Mid-Pacific, we may well ask ourselves whether it is really true that the offensive against Japan has in any substantial sense been delayed by what we have been doing in the European theater. We may ask the question because it seems unlikely that the new navy which Admiral Nimitz now commands could have been built, commissioned, and trained much more quickly than it has been. To have created in less than two years this new sea and air force of modern battleships and carriers and all the auxiliaries is one of the greatest achievements in war, and it seems extremely unlikely that the thing could have been speeded up by more than a very few months at best if we had given the Pacific war absolute priority on all our resources. We must ask ourselves how much faster aircraft carriers can be built and can be manned with trained crews than the Navy Department has built and manned them.

THE CONTROVERSY, always latent in Congress and elsewhere, in regard to the grand strategy of the war, has been presented to the American public as an issue between the Churchill-Roosevelt view and that of some of their American critics, or even as an issue between General MacArthur and the President. It may have looked like that when practically all the fighting against Japanese forces was being carried on in the Solomons and in New Guinea, and when the British were unable to undertake the reconquest of Burma, and we were unable to send substantial assistance to China.

But the appearances, we can now see, were misleading. For while little seemed to be happening in the Pacific, in fact we were building up the mighty armada of sea, air, and ground forces which has now struck its first blow in the Gilberts. This action places the old controversy about strategy in an entirely new light. For it discloses the fact that our real strategy in the Pacific is dictated by the Navy, and that it follows the classical pattern of American Naval strategy in the Pacific.

WHAT ADMIRAL NIMITZ is undertaking now is in essence what the Navy always intended to do in a war with Japan—namely to gain command of the western Pacific and make the Japanese island empire subject to American sea power. The Navy never intended to fight the main action against Japan from Australia: we have had to fight from Australia only because our unpreparedness in 1941 compelled us to retreat to Australia. The Navy has never agreed to the idea that the main attack upon Japan could be launched from the distant and inconvenient places upon which disasters and defeats compelled us to fall back.

For this reason the whole controversy about the size of the forces assigned to General MacArthur has been fictitious. For while this controversy has been aired in Congress and in the press, the actual concentration of American power for the main challenge to Japan has been going on secretly in another theater—in the theater where the Navy has always meant to make its main effort.

Army Seizes Leather Plants As Strike Ends

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 24 (AP).—The National Leather Workers Union, whose strike forced closure of a number of leather and tannery plants in the Peabody-Salem area, voted today to end the strike and return to work Friday in compliance with Army orders.

James F. Dunn, business agent of the independent union, said the vote was unanimous. It was taken at a mass meeting which followed the arrival of Lieut. Col. Curtis G. Pratt, acting for the War Department, who took over the affected plants in a seizure order issued by President Roosevelt.

Dunn said the union voted also to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor.

Most of the struck plants had contracts with the International Fur and Leather Workers Union (CIO). The independent union struck two weeks ago claiming two of its members were discharged unfairly.

The President's order said the managements should continue functioning to the maximum extent possible, under War Department supervision and "shall make employment available under existing collective bargaining contracts to all workers seeking employment to the extent that they are needed."

Possession and operation of the plants by the Government is to be terminated as soon as feasible.

Mr. Roosevelt called the strikes "inexcusable" and a defiance of the WLB, a challenge to government by law and a blow against the effective prosecution of the war.

Tokyo Destruction Is Advocated by Admiral Gatch

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Rear Admiral Thomas L. Gatch, judge advocate of the Navy, told a graduating class of midshipmen today that "if General Pershing had had his way, an American Army would have marched through Berlin down Unter den Linden, and you young men would not be facing me today in uniform."

Speaking to 970 graduates at the United States Naval Reserve School at Columbia University, Admiral Gatch said that "shameful misuse" was made of the Allied victory in the last war and that each disarmament conference and treaty following the armistice was "another step toward war."

French Accept Moscow Pact

Algiers, Nov. 24 (AP).—The French consultative assembly unanimously expressed France's adherence to the principles of the Atlantic Charter and the enunciations of the Moscow conference today after Gen. Charles de Gaulle made a new demand for complete Allied recognition of his government.

France was not invited to participate in the Moscow conference, and the French Committee of National Liberation served notice November 5 that it would refuse to consider as binding the decisions of the European advisory council set up at that meeting.

Navy's 5-Billion Construction Plan Gets Approval

With a burst of speed, the Senate Naval Affairs Committee approved yesterday a $5,300,000,000 naval construction program—largely involving craft for amphibious operations—in advance of its formal introduction in the Senate.

The seventh bill of its type since June, 1940, the measure authorizes acquisition, conversion or construction of 2,500,000 tons of auxiliary vessels and one million tons of landing craft and district craft.

The Navy's witnesses said most of the types authorized in the bill are for use in projected amphibious operations. They include auxiliary aircraft carriers, ammunition ships, refrigerator ships, miscellaneous auxiliaries, cargo ships, mine sweepers, tankers, tugs, landing craft, and tank landing ships.

Naturalist Program Will End Sunday

Irving C. Root, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, announced yesterday the 1943 naturalist program will be concluded Sunday with exception of occasional camera strolls to be held throughout the winter.

W. Drew Chick, jr., assistant park naturalist, will conduct the final activities Sunday with a bird walk starting at the south end of 14th st. Highway Bridge at 8:30 a. m. Chick will also lead the afternoon walk

World Relief Cost Now Put At 2 Billion

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 24 (AP). Although the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has been driving at obtaining an over-all purse of $2,500,000,000 for relief of war zones, a member of the conference said today that "more conservatively" the sum will be about two billion dollars.

The same source, who declined use of his name, said "even the statisticians are at sea about the final sum with which UNRRA can work because several nations have no figures on the national income." This is the basis from which UNRRA is working, since the formula for contributions has been set at 1 per cent of the national income of the contributing nations.

Cost After Last War

The sum of $2,500,000,000 has been the amount toward which UNRRA financial conferees have been driving since that was about the cost of relief after the last war.

However, statisticians now working out the 1 per cent formula have announced that the contribution from the United States would be $1,356,000,000.

It is hoped that the entire sum of two billion dollars or even more, can be assembled since delegates here have generally stated that their various nations will make strenuous efforts to meet the needs of UNRRA.

Speed Emphasized

While the financial experts continued to work at footing the bill for relief, rehabilitation experts brought out a report which put an emphasis on the need for speed in all newly liberated areas.

Stockpiles should be created immediately of raw materials, machinery and spare parts, one committee suggested, to permit their quick transportation to countries as they are liberated.

The committee also recommended that a pool of mobile power units be ready to move and that certain processing materials needed to reopen factories, such as welding units, lubricating oils, greases, and belting, be stockpiled.

Ambulance Dispatch System to Be Checked

The committee that set up the ambulance dispatch center system will meet to resurvey the system Wednesday at 11 a. m. at the Police and Fire Clinic, 1018 13th st. nw., Dr. John A. Reed announced yesterday.

The meetitng is being called on recommendation of the Commissioners following a case of reported delay in dispatch of an ambulance with a doctor to Juvenile Court, November 5.

Graduate Nurses Will Be Registered Week of Feb. 7

Nation-wide registration of all graduate nurses, including those retired from active practice, will be conducted at local hospitals and health centers during the week beginning February 7.

Paul V. McNutt, Chairman of the War Manpower Commission, said in announcing this yesterday that nearly half of the country's estimated 400,000 trained nurses are not now practicing.

Rapidly increasing needs of the armed services coupled with a serious shortage on the home front make an inventory advisable, he said.

Those not now in nursing service will be asked to state whether they are willing to accept service. Those now serving will be asked whether they are willing to be transferred elsewhere if needed.

Chinese Exclusion Law Before Senate Tomorrow

Speedy passage by the Senate of the House-approved bill repealing the Chinese exclusion laws was indicated yesterday as Senate leaders arranged to call up the measure tomorrow and Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon withdrew his previously announced opposition to it.

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky predicted the bill would be passed with "very little opposition." It would allow China a total of 105 immigrants annually and make an estimated 42,000 alien Chinese already in the United States eligible for citizenship.

A MESSAGE OF THANKS and Appreciation to
OUR PATRONS

THE MISSOURI PACIFIC is deeply and sincerely thankful that it is privileged to make a worthwhile contribution to Victory, thankful that, because of a long continued program of improvements, America's entrance into the war found our railroad in the best physical condition of its nearly 100 years of existence, and ably and efficiently staffed by well trained, experienced and loyal employes.

But next to being thankful that it is thus able dependably to meet its full share of the Nation's heavy transportation demands, it is thankful for the public's friendly understanding of its wartime problems and for the active help of its patrons.

It is thankful to shippers and receivers of freight for their intelligent, thoughtful and cheerfully given cooperation. By heeding requests to load freight cars to capacity, to load and unload them promptly, our patrons are materially increasing the supply of available freight car equipment.

From travelers, too, our railroad receives a full measure of appreciated assistance. Whenever possible they plan their trips in advance, travel on mid-week days and with less luggage than usual, and are gracious and uncomplaining when unable sometimes to obtain preferred accommodations or if they experience unavoidable delays and inconveniences.

America's railroads are handling a volume of freight and passenger traffic that dwarfs anything in transportation history. Their service is everywhere recognized as the very mainspring of the country's huge war effort and as the outstanding example of the ability, capacity and dependability of private enterprise—an inspiring proof that, here in America, industry can be and is efficient without the whip cracking, the regimentation and domination of dictators.

"OURS . . . to fight for . . . FREEDOM FROM WANT"—one of Norman Rockwell's famous Four Freedoms poster series reproduced by permission of The Saturday Evening Post

But in spite of the railroads' preparedness to handle a vastly increased amount of traffic, in spite of the highly developed cooperation between the railroads themselves and their employes, their almost miraculous performance would be impossible save for the voluntary aid and assistance of all government agencies and of shippers and travelers and the public generally—a spirit of cooperation that is typically American, a spirit of which all Americans are proud, and a spirit that bodes certain defeat for all those who seek to rule by edict and by force.

In expressing, on behalf of the Missouri Pacific Lines and their 45,000 employes, profound thanks and appreciation for the cooperation rendered us, I solicit not only your continued help but your constructive criticisms and suggestions.

Partners Draw Stiff Penalties For War Fraud

Detroit, Nov. 24 (AP).—Adolph Spalek, partner in the Spalek Engineering Co., a subcontracting firm, today was sentenced to 12 years in prison and fined $30,000 by Federal Judge Frank A. Picard on conviction on war contract fraud charges. William J. Zrenick, the other partner, was sentenced to seven years in prison and fined $20,000.

Both were convicted three weeks ago on charges of attempting to defraud the Federal Government of $190,000 through payroll padding in dealings of the firm with three prime contractors—General Motors, Chrysler Corp. and the Ford Motor Co.

The Justice Department said the sentences were the heaviest assessed so far against individual defendants in a war fraud case.

Judge Picard, in passing sentence, declared "if the practices indulged in by your company . . . are prevalent, then the amount of money the Government is being defrauded out of on many of its war contracts will reach astronomical figures.

Judge Picard said the defendants, both immigrants from Austria, took workers from the shop during a lull and had them paint the partners' private houses, paying them $1.25 an hour and receiving $2.60 an hour for each at the same time from the prime contractors.

Cincinnati Firm Indicted

The Justice Department announced that a Federal grand jury in Cincinnati yesterday returned an indictment charging the Schweitzer Brothers Co., Cincinnati, and two of its officials with sabotage and conspiracy to defraud the Government through defective welding of links used in tank baulks, supplied to the Nay.

In addition to the company, the indictment named William A. Schweitzer, president, and William F. Grizzell, foreman.

The indictment contains nine counts, the first two charging conspiracy to defraud the Government and conspiracy to commit an offense against the Government through sabotage. The remaining seven counts alleged particular acts of sabotage in the making of defective war materials.

The Schweitzer company the department said, held a subcontract with the Goldsmith Metal Lath Co., Cincinnati, to weld links used in tank baulks. Tank baulks are used in connection with antisubmarine defense and support heavy steel nets in harbor and other defenses.

The indictment charged that the defendants "knowingly, wilfully, unlawfully, and feloniously" caused the links to be welded in a defective manner "with the reason to believe that such acts might interfere with or obstruct the United States in carrying on the war."

Speedy Return To Automaking Held Possible

By the Associated Press

Realistic planning now—in the midst of war—can help bring this country the highest standard of peacetime living it has even known, General Motors President Charles E. Wilson told the Senate's Truman Committee yesterday.

Under ideal conditions, he said, industry could be turning out civilian automobiles in three months from the day the war ends. But to do so it would have to be "unbridled" by Government complications and have the materials and equipment immediately available.

Without sufficient postwar planning, he said, the country faces difficult times as its industrial power turns from making the goods of war to the goods of peace.

"It is time now to tell the people there is a tough job to be done," he said. "We must realistically prepare for peace."

He recommended that the Government decide now what machines it will make available for peacetime manufacturers and decide how the machinery can be used after the war. Plants could lease or buy the Goernment's war tools, he said, for postwar delivery to help them get into immediate civilian production.

"Not only do we face the problem of unscrambling Government machines from our own," he said, "we have the problem of getting back our own equipment which has been distributed for war production."

The meetings will be presided over by Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the Bureau of Maternal Health and Child Welfare of the Health Department, who is president of the society. Also on the agenda is the election of board members and officers for the coming year.

Va. Pastor Gets Call

9-Month Net Of 385 Firms Mounts 11.4%

Estimated income of 385 companies aggregated $1,589,563,000 in the first nine months of 1943, an increase of 11.4 per cent over the like months of the preceding year, a tabulation by the magazine Exchange disclosed today.

The publication, sponsored by the New York Stock Exchange, said the results showed a notable alteration in trend from last year and the improvement was contrary to numerous predictions made soon after the Revenue Act of 1942 was enacted.

Reports from 390 companies at this time last year disclosed a decline of 16.3 per cent in total net income under 1941.

Companies engaged in war production made substantial gains, particularly the automotive and chemical groups. Automotive companies gained 24.6 per cent over the corresponding 1942 figure after a decline of 40.7 in the 1941 interval. The chemical group increased 10.4 per cent to aggregate $162,508,000 for 42 corporations, compared with a decline of 30.1 per cent in net profits in 1942 compared with the previous year.

Amusements continued ahead of all industrial groups in gain, reporting a 60 per cent increase over 1942.

Railroads continued to move ahead with net income showing an increase of 21.6 per cent, compared with a gain of 44.2 per cent in the first nine months of 1942 over 1941. While rail earnings have been substantial in respect to fixed charges, it is possible that debt retirement will not prove as extensive this year as many observers expected, the magazine said.

Building, business and office equipment, finance, mining and steel, iron and coke were among the groups reporting decreases in total net income, the magazine said.

Work Till WLB Acts, Plea to Bus Drivers

Panel's Head Says Any Wage Changes Will Be Retroactive

A two-day hearing on the Arnold-operated bus line labor dispute last night closed with an appeal by the three-man panel's labor member, E. J. Shave, to the drivers "to keep this operation going until a decision is handed down by the War Labor Board."

Shave was joined by the other panel members, Dr. Paul Douglass, chairman, and John Twohy, industry representative, in the promise that "everything will be done to expedite matters."

Dr. Douglass said that the panel recommendation to the regional board at Atlanta, Ga., will probably be sent there Monday and predicted that a final decision should not be expected before the second week of December.

The panel's appeal to the employes of the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. to stay on the job and take any decision "like good sports"—an appeal also directed at the company heads—came in the wake of more than 15 hours of testimony from union and company which failed to come any closer in their views than they were at the beginning of the procedure.

Only in regard to union demands for amending certain overtime regulations was any approach achieved but, as Eli L. Oliver, union counsel, declared, "wages are the real issue in this case."

Upon the assertion by Fred J. Rice, company counsel, that last week's work stoppage had cost the company $5500, and that therefore the company does not feel bound to any previous agreement for retroactive pay, Dr. Douglass ruled that an agreement between union and company still stood and that "any wage adjustment that may be made will be retroactive to May 18, 1943, when the last contract expired."

Means Higher Fares

Joseph L. Arnold, vice president and general manager, and other Arnold line representatives, answered the union's presentation of the previous day, and stated:

1. Any increase in wages would have to be paid by the public by higher fares. The company owes some $400,000 and the high salaries paid to general officers, as cited by the union, can be explained by the fact that the line's owners are realizing returns on their investments for the first time. According to testimony, the company has no fund for paying higher wages.

2. The union's contention that extremely long working hours of the drivers constituted a menace to the public safety were met by company charts showing an excellent safety record. Arnold said that the company had won a safety award for the States of Virginia, North and South Carolina in 1941, and that their "record has been improving since."

3. Absenteeism was blamed as a major factor for the necessity of working men "exceedingly long hours." This, the company said, is not our fault.

Wages paid to Arnold bus drivers are 20.9 per cent higher now than they were in January, 1941, and, according to Rice, would be 40 per cent above the 1941 level if the union's demand for a 14-cent hourly increase is granted.

Represented by the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, the workers contend that the limits of the Little Steel formula fail to apply in their case which is based on a claim to abrogate an "inequity."

Swarthout Impresses Filled House

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Gladys Swarthout. Program: Carneval Overture, Op. 92 (Dvorak), "Che faro senza Euridice" (Gluck), Deux Gymnopedies (Satie-Debussy), Four Auvergnais Folksongs (arr. Canteloube), Symphony No. 2 in D major (Brahms).

Constitution Hall was crowded on Thanksgiving Eve for the second subscription concert of the National Symphony Orchestra. Had it not been a subscription concert, one would have said that the large attendance had been drawn by Gladys Swarthout, but this time the soloist was incidental in the scheme of things. The subscription series has for the first time in three years reached the goal of capacity houses, a consummation no longer devoutly to be wished, but to be gratefully acknowledged by the orchestra association. Miss Swarthout, however, was an indubitable adornment of the program as well as a startling apparition in her vivid green gown and maroon mittens.

Inasmuch as one school of archeologists maintains that the ancient Greeks tinted their statuary, the soloist's costume may have been appropriate to her first offering, Gluck's aria, "One faro sensa Euridice." It was certainly in keeping with the Provencal warmth of the four Auvergnais folksongs arranged by Jean Joseph Paul Canteloube, a composer affiliated with the Felibrige movement in French literature. These are delightful regional songs, which Miss Swarthout has sung here before with piano accompaniment, and the orchestral coloring greatly enhanced their charm. They have cadences which show the lingering in southern France of the Greek modes introduced there by the colonizers of Marsala, which is in our time Marseille.

Miss Swarthout was in excellent voice and pleased the audience so much that she was enthusiastically recalled for extra numbers. The first of these, a fifth Cantaloube arrangement, was done with orchestra, while the second, a White spiritual from North Carolina, "I Wonder as I Wander," was simply and affectingly sung to the harp accompaniment of Dorothy Remsen. This song, too, has its harmonc roots deep in the past, for it is neither our major or minor modes, but in a modal scale ending in a flat seventh, and in our modern ears sounds unfinished.

To offset the familiar "Carneval Overture" of Dvorak that began the concert, Hans Kindler chose the infrequently programmed "Gymnopedies" orchestrated by Debussy from the piano score by Erik Leslie Satie, who was at once a farceur and a highly original composer. The orchestration does wonders for these pieces by enveloping them in a tonal atmosphere of weird beauty, and in so doing may express what the composer had in mind but could not project through the piano idiom. The concert closed with an enjoyable performance of Brahms' second symphony.

Black Plans Long Study of Esquire 'Taboo' Evidence

The fate of Esquire magazine and its lissome Varga lass, in the hands of Third Assistant Postmaster General Ramsey S. Black since the three-week-long Postoffice hearing ended on November 6, will not be known for a "considerable time," an official said last night.

Black will pass the ledgersful of testimony on to Postmaster General Frank Walker as soon as he has digested them and arrived at a recommendation to accompany the mass of evidence.

Meanwhile, the three-man trial board which heard the arguments for and against revocation of the magazine's second mailing permit on the ground that it was salacious and lewd, could not be reached for a statement last night.

First Assistant Deputy Postmaster General Tom C. Cargill had left for Montgomery, Ala., where his mother died yesterday, and neither Walter Myers, fourth assistant postmaster general, nor Chief Clerk Frank H. Ellis was in town, the latter having left Washington for two weeks.

Nation to Ask Billion Less In 4th War Loan Campaign

The Fourth War Loan drive will ask one billion less nationally and a smaller quota for the District than the 94 millions of the Third Loan, it was said by War Finance officials last night.

The national drive in the third loan was 15 billions. The new quota is 15 per cent less and it was expected the District quota will be cut in proportion.

The fourth campaign will begin January 18 and conclude in February. Plans for its operation are now being formulated and committees will be announced next month, it was said.

Coincident with the announcement, Secretary of the Navy Knox said the Third War Bond Drive, held in connection with the last War Loan Drive, had netted $1,500,000 over the quota of $32,600,000 for the purchase of carrier-based aircraft.

Former Envoy Turns Firefighter

Frederick A. Sterling, United States Minister to Sweden until February of last year, last night put out a small fire on the back porch of his home, 3400 Prospect ave. nw., before fire department equipment arrived at the scene.

Sterling discovered the fire just before retiring and while his wife called for help, he went out with a bucket of water and got the fire under control. There was no damage to the home, one of the outstanding Georgetown estates.

Carol's "Charter" Speech Released

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Although banning its broadcast last night, the Office of Censorship approved for publication today text of a speech by former King Carol of Rumania, in which he declared that the "Atlantic Charter will become the constitution of the world of tomorrow."

The self-exiled ruler said that his people were "waiting for help so as to pass with al ltheir hearts and souls, in the moment when it will be most useful for the military action of the United Nations, to the side of the democracies."

City News In Brief

The defendant pleaded not guilty and the complaining witness took the stand in Municipal Court yesterday, saying the defendant's fists had done serious damage to his features.

The defendant then admitted it was a whale of a fight, but said he might have controlled his temper if (1) the complaining witness hadn't bitten his finger off at the beginning of the fight; (2) hadn't held the finger in his mouth for quite some time, and (3) hadn't spit it out in disguest.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn thought judiciously for a moment, then said, "Justice has already been done the defendant," and dismissed the case.

Swimming contests and races and a motion picture portraying Army life will be on the special program for boys to be held at the YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Tregaskis Expected to Recover

Algiers, Nov. 24 (INS).—Richard Tregaskis, International News Service war correspondent wounded Monday on the Italian front, was said to be "coming along satisfactorily" tonight although he probably will be unable to return to action for several months.

TREGASKIS

Army medical authorities revealed that the towering 6-foot-7-inch correspondent was struck by a shell fragment while in the front lines with the Americans of the Fifth Army. The metal pierced his steel helmet, necessitating the removal of 11 pieces of splintered bone and 9 pieces of brain tissue at a frontline hospital. Physicians said they expect him to make a good recovery.

Tregaskis is the author of the best-seller, "Guadalcanal Diary," which related the experiences of the Marines who invaded the first Solomon island.

Tregaskis has been in the vanguard of American forces in some of the war's most thrilling developments. In addition to landing with the Guadalcanal invaders, he was with the carrier task force which launched the Tokyo raiders, and went through the Sicilian campaign.

Insurance Risk? Traffic Director In No-Man's Land

Algiers, Nov. 24 (AP).—Corpl. William Sunnell, a military policeman from Stonington, Conn., was sent to a front-line village in Italy to direct traffic.

On arrival he found no traffic and the only people were a couple of dead Germans. He took his post, however, and all went well except for the burst of an occasional shell nearby.

Then he saw an American column creeping up.

"What are you doing here?" asked the officer in command of the column.

"Directing traffic, sir; this town was taken by us yesterday."

"Sure it was," said the officer, "and the Germans took it back last night and now we've taken it again."

Youthful Stars Revert To Form in Melodious 'Girl Crazy,' at Palace

THE KIDS are up to their old tricks.

In "Girl Crazy," opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland have another of the juvenile, musical romances of the sort that first caused them to be hailed as two of the most fabulous youngsters on the screen.

They sing, they dance, they clown, they "mug" and they go sentimental. Everything approaching the "consequential" in this amiable frolic could be tossed through the eye of a needle without touching a side.

In adapting the George Gershwin-Guy Bolton-Jack McGowan stage piece to the screen, Fred Finklehoffe has strained a little too hard in the early sequences for comedy effects that still remain essentially unfunny, and occasionally has dragged in some of the hoariest of "gags," but in the large view he has contrived a happy business, perfectly attuned to the carefree holiday mood.

It is in the nine Gershwin tunes that "Girl Crazy" places its chief reliance and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has seen to it that their catchiness is appropriately emphasized, with Tommy Dorsey and His Orchestra to provide the instrumental background and, now and again, a featured number without voices. "Bidin' My Time," given a quaint setting and interpretation, and "Embraceable You" stand out as they always have among the most tuneful of the lilts, and to make "I Got Rhythm" a bigger "smash" than it ever has been before Busby Berkeley was imported to convert it into one of his gargantuan production numbers, occupying an acreage about the size of the Ellipse. The entire cowgirl and cowboy population of the Far West seems to have been recruited for this one.

Play Has a Plot

Since this is a "book" play and not a vaudeville show or revue, the story is well defined and persistent, even if at times far-fetched and always tenuous. The playboy son of a wealthy New York publisher is sent to noncoeducational Cody College to forget about girls and pick up a little learning.

He picks up as little as possible from the classroom—which one never sees at any time during the action—and so far forgets the gentler gender as to swamp the institution with feminine applications for enrollment, thereby saving the school's franchise and the dear old dean's job. In these circumstances the dean, of course, would have to be the granddaddy of Ginger Gray, the only gal on the place, who runs the mail to and from the campus and makes a "new man" of Danny Churchill, jr.

Danny, in the person of Mickey Rooney, is about as fresh and cantankerous a lad as Master Rooney always has been, given his head. But there is no gainsaying the versatility of the fellow. Not only does he sing, dance and cavort extravagantly, but does a solo bit at the piano with the Dorsey band and later does a little less pretentious guitar-strumming. Opposite him, as Ginger, Judy Garland is engagingly ingenuous, her co-star's superior in getting the most out of her lines and in perfect fettle in the songs, which range from humorous to sentimental to hot.

Sturdy Support

Guy Kibbee, "Rags" Ragland and Henry O'Neill, as the senior Churchill, lead the supporting cast, which is fortunate in including Gil Stratton, Robert F. Strickland, June Allyson, Nancy Walker and Frances Rafferty among its more potent sparkplugs.

Norman Taurog has directed the picture with sufficient pace to keep the mind off the lack of splendor in the Western desert setting. Anyhow, Mr. Berkeley makes up for that handsomely in that final sequence of "I Got Rhythm."

Pete Smith's "Scrap Happy," in which he discovers some remarkable relics in a Government junk heap; "Who Killed Who," a cartoon comedy, and the picturized News of the Day will be enjoyed by the Palace's holiday customers as the supplementaries of a feature that will probably have them hanging from the rafters a little later in the day.

A Buckaroo and a Buckarette

MICKEY ROONEY AND JUDY GARLAND
costarred in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Girl Crazy," which opens this morning as the holiday attraction on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. In it, also, are Tommy Dorsey and His Orchestra to beat out the Gershwin tunes, including "Bidin' My Time" and "I Got Rhythm"

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Nov. 24.—John Boettiger, son-in-law of the President and now a major with the Allied Military Government in Italy, is severing his relations with William Randolph Hearst. Boettiger has been publisher of Hearst's Seattle Post-Intelligencer for the past few years. The contract expires soon and will not be renewed . . . The U. S. Army's seven orientation films will be shown in England, with an introduction by Winston Churchill. The American Treasury will receive over half a million dollars' profit from this deal . . . Al Jolson, whose illness was front-paged a few weeks ago, will return from Miami this week, fully recovered.

AL JOLSON

The censors of the State of Pennsylvania, in a sudden, mysterious display of curious sensitivity, have cut from the Army-made film, "Battle of Russia," all the news-reel excerpts showing Nazi atrocities in Russia. The censors, shutting their eyes to the realities of Nazi warfare, cut these factual shots because they considered them too gruesome. This is the film which Secretary Stimson wanted all America to see . . . Edgar Bergen is planning to return to Broadway, in a variety show which he will produce himself . . . Assistant Secretary of State Berle will leave for Mexico City soon, for what he hopes will be a vacation.

Lieut. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., has told his friends that the Navy will be his career after the war, and that he is finished with show business. Fairbanks, incidentally, has written a book full of poetry, inspired by all the action he's seen . . . Randolph Paul, the United States Treasury's tax expert, is favored for the Federal judgeship, which will become vacant when Judge Woolsey retires . . . The official film record of the Battle of Tunis is being produced by the British and by Col. Frank Capra, jointly, and will be released as a joint effort. Its title will be a quote from Churchill's speech—his famous descriptive, "The End of the Beginning."

In the White House, President Roosevelt watched some of his staff eating rare foodstuffs which had been sent to him by anonymous admirers and which the Secret Service naturally kept him from touching. "At least," lamented the President, observing the feast, "at least if one of you got a little sick—" . . Henry Youngman, the comic, has been reclassified by his draft board and is 1-A . . . HEDDA HOPPER

Cinema Owes a Debt

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 24.—Metro's been trying to persuade Capt. Clark Gable to star in "Susie Q," story of a Flying Fortress. I'd hate to see Metro or any studio exploit Clark's military career by putting it on the screen. Maybe he could do another picture, but to play in reel life what he's actually done would take away some of the glory that he's earned. He's too great a guy for that. What Clark and Jimmy Stewart have done for the whole motion picture industry in this war is of incalculable value to everybody in Hollywood. Let's not dim it.

CARMEN MIRANDA

Too Bad, Carmen

Carmen Miranda, who brought the bare midriff style of evening gown from South America, can no longer show so much of hers. She has a 5-inch scar, result of her operation. Somebody at the studio suggested she have a special decoration made to stick over it. Carmen takes a vitamin shot a day, then sulfa drugs which drag her down. She's thin, but looked stunning in a white and pink costume, with bracelets to match. They looked as though they were made out of stick candy.

So They Chose "Indiana"

Wonder why Twentieth changed the name of "The Phantom Filly" to "Home in Indiana." The picture was shot in Ohio, Kentucky and Hollywood. Henry Hathaway and the company are just back from doing county fairs in three States. Lon McCallister made a great hit with all the horse trainers and he actually drove a sulky in two important races. He got a draft deferment for this picture and now has made enough money to buy a Malibu home for his mother and grandmother. First morning they were in their new home, he got up at 5 a. m., built a roaring fire in the living room, then woke them to help celebrate the first home they've ever owned. A view of him will be taken out of the picture, which is in Technicolor, and enlarged to hang over that fireplace.

'The Fallen Sparrow,' Capitol, Tense Psychological Thriller

By Marjorie Kelly

"The Fallen Sparrow," which this morning opens on the screen at Loew's Capitol, is another of the unusual films RKO-Radio has been turning out in increasing numbers.

It is distinguished by its psychological overtones, by John Garfield's thoughtful, emotional and often moving characterization of a Spanish Civil War veteran, and by speaking out more plainly than any American film to date about that conflict—though, even so, the political issues are left pretty cloudy. The film does, however, recognize at last what has been common knowledge—that the Spanish Civil War is not over, and that the "little man in Berchtesgaden" was involved in it.

The plot, lamentably, revolves around the hero's sentimental struggles to preserve the flag of his brigade; struggles which make his devotion to that flag appear pure fetichism. For he stubbornly undergoes months of torture in a Spanish prison camp rather than reveal the whereabouts of the standard, and, more than that, sees two of his dearest friends killed rather than give up the information.

Exaggerated Obsession

Such romantic obsession with a symbol, giving it more importance than the people it represents, strikes one as fanatical, both in the boy who tries so desperately to keep the flag hidden and in the Fascists who try with such ingenious sadism to get hold of it. "Some day my brigade is going to reassemble," explains the boy, "and when they do, they'll have their flag." As if the Spanish people were such children the possession of a scrap of bunting would make a difference whether they resumed their fight or not!

The story is difficult to follow, and though its highly suspenseful development will impel careful attention, still it is impossible to tell until nearly the end which side of the barricades certain characters are on, and the tale's conclusion, which is neither romantic nor happy, leaves ends dangling. The best thing in the picture is the interesting treatment of the hero's psychological difficulties.

Beautiful "Decorations"

Three lovely girls, Maureen O'Hara, Patricia Morison and Martha O'Driscoll, are involved, with little to do but ornament the background. Walter Slezak gives a harrowing interpretation of an old German with a morbid interest in the history of torture methods.

On stage are the Three Mandels in "A Dress Rehearsal," Allen and Kent in "Dances of Yesterday and Today," Dodson's Simian Braintrust, and Ming, Ling and Hoo Shee in "A Chinese Jamboree." More of them on a later day.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THANKSGIVING FOR THE PRESIDENT this year might be compared to the Thanksgiving George Washington celebrated with General Lafayette in 1777. They were at Valley Forge together and it was not a happy occasion. Similarly, the President's family this year are spread out all over the fa-flung war fronts.

Usually the Roosevelts have gone in for a real family Thanksgiving—turkey, church, a big reunion of all the children and grandchildren. But not this year.

Moreover, the merchants of Washington this year will celebrate Thanksgiving very much as they did in the early days. Thanksgiving was a purely New England holiday during the early days of the Republic and when George Washington asked Congress in 1789 to set aside a holidays to be observed by the entire country, there was vigorous objection.

The objection came chiefly from the Democrats, who accused Washington (as Roosevelt is accused today) of exercising undue Federal power and trampling on States' rights. So, thanks to Democratic opposition, Thanksgiving did not become a national holiday until three-quarters of a century later. Then it was the merchants along the sleepy Potomac who really saw the advantage of Thanksgiving.

It was in 1845 that the Washington grocers and wine merchants woke up to the possibilities of a national holiday and began to advertise "Sixty barrels of white wine, forty barrels of champagne, and New York cider all by recent packet from New York via Alexandria."

Thanksgiving of Past Presidents

JUST AS THIS THANKSGIVING is a day of work for President Roosevelt, so most Thanksgivings in the past have been days of arduous labor in the White House. This was largely because of the lame-duck session of Congress which met shortly after the holiday. In fact, future Presidents can give silent thanks to Senator George Norris of Nebraska for having abolished the lame-duck session.

The history of previous Thanksgivings in the White House as far as they are recorded in the newspapers of other days, reads somewhat like this:

President Monroe, 1823, spent the day writing message to Congress. Unable to attend church . . . President Buchanan, 1857, long conference with Governor Walker of Kansas over influx of slave traders as a result of Kansas-Nebraska Act . . . President Grant, 1876, unable to receive visitors; spent day writing message to Congress . . . President McKinley, 1900, spent day working on message to Congress and considering whether to recommend pensions for former slaves. The next day, Mrs. McKinley, bored, left for a shopping expedition in New York . . .

President Harding, 1921, signed bills at the Capitol all morning, dined at noon with the family and informally away from the White House at night . . . President Coolidge, 1927, rose at his usual hour, took setting-up exercises, shaved himself, breakfasted with Mrs. Coolidge, then retired to his study to work on his message to Congress . . . President Hoover, 1930, rose at 6 a. m., played handball, breakfasted at 8, attended Friends' meeting, spent remainder of day writing his annual message.

So, until the Norris lame-duck amendment, Thanksgiving Day for the President of the United States was nothing to be thankful for.

Last War Holiday?

THIS YEAR'S THANKSGIVING dinner in the White House will compare with that of Woodrow Wilson in 1917. Mrs. Wilson at that time served only three courses: 1. Cream of oyster soup with slices of hot buttered toast; 2, turkey with trimmings and vegetables (burning brandy was omitted, as well as cranberries); 3, pumpkin pie but no plum pudding. Black coffee was served as a "digestive stimulant."

Since that war holiday and the present have intervened some gay Thanksgivings, especially during the early years of the New Deal, when most of the Roosevelt children came home and the White House was one of the gayest spots in the Nation.

But while Thanksgiving this year may be bleak and dreary as far as the First Family is concerned, military chieftains, despite their professional skepticism, privately are hoping—with some reason—that this may be the last war holiday as far as the European theater is concerned.

The last Thanksgiving FDR will celebrate in the White House—in 1944—undoubtedly will be a lot gayer. Or will it be the last? That's the question a lot of people besides the White House cooks would like to have answered.

No Place to Go In Germany

THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT, with characteristic thoroughness, prepared for the Allied blitz by assigning to each city which might be bombed another city to which its population would be removed in case bombing made evacuation necessary. For example, the people of Hamburg were assigned to go to Bavaria; and citizens of Ruhr cities were assigned to Silesia.

But the plan now breaks down in terrible confusion, because the areas of protection have themselves become vulnerable. Bavaria at one time was supposed to be remote enough for safety. But now Allied bombers are striking from Italy, and have attacked Vienna, so that Bavarians themselves are looking for a place to go.

In fact, there is no place which either has not been bombed or which is not threatened. There's no hiding place over there.

Merry-Go-Round

THE WIFE OF REPRESENTATIVE La Vern R. Dilweg, former All-America footballer at Marquette University, is a former star athlete herself. Mrs. Dilweg, nee Eleanor Coleman, represented the United States in the breast-stroke swimming event at the Olympics in France . . . Hard-working Representative Thad Wasielewski of Wisconsin usually takes his one-year-old son, Francis, along when he goes to the office on Sunday afternoons to look over his mail. "I'm grooming him to be a Congressman by getting him used to the mail," says Wasielewski. "And wouldn't the little shaver like to get his hands on it!" . . . One of the prized show-pieces in a private collection of old guns and other knick-knacks belonging to Representative Frank Boykin of Alabama are the spurs Jesse James was wearing when he died . . . One out of every ten members of Congress has been a newspaperman in the past. Working newsmen every day hear from some member, "I used to be an old newspaper man myself." This has earned the gag line: "Until you found there was no money in old newspapers."

Thanksgiving Fare Leaner This Year

forced to add sections to most trains to care for the holiday influx.

But family reunions will be at a minimum this year, and rationing and food shortages, especially turkey, will induce many to eat their holiday dinners in restaurants. Local hotels and dining places are prepared to serve all the fixin's of the traditional meal—though at a greater cost than last year. The dinner that last year cost $1.25 will cost $1.50 this Thanksgiving, in accordance with OPA holiday prices. Home-cooked dinners will be more expensive, too, as over-all food prices in the District rose 8 per cent in the past year.

Unable to join their families for the traditional Thanksgiving meal, Government workers who lack facilities for preparing dinner in their homes will have at their disposal equipment of the Reformation Lutheran Church. Through cooperation of the Defense Commission of the Washington Federation of Churches and church women's groups, employe councilors of Government agencies have arranged for other groups to cook their own meals at city churches.

Salvage Campaign

Meanwhile, calling upon District residents to share the season's spirit of giving in donations to the discarded clothing and rag salvage campaign, James E. Colliflower, chairman of the D. C. Salvage committee, yesterday declared, "as we celebrate Thanksgiving throughout the Nation, our people should resolve to cooperate wholeheartedly in this drive." Collection depots for contributions have been set up in churches throughout the city until the campaign closes on December 4.

Servicemen and women on leave in the District will celebrate Thanksgiving Day at the following USO clubs:

Five D. C. Men Report For Duty Tomorrow

Five Washington men inducted into naval forces November 12, will report for active duty tomorrow, District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

Baldin F. Cook will join the Coast Guard, while John M. Dooley, Dan D. Levin, Paul B. Hamilton, and Thomas B. Skarvoones will report to the Marines.

Urged to Save Fats

Herbert M. Faust, director of WPB's salvage division, yesterday asked housewives and restaurant chefs to save the grease from Thanksgiving turkeys and other fowl to aid in the fight against the Axis.

"Grease and all other fats," said Faust, "are needed to make glycerine, a necessary ingredient in explosives, medical supplies used by the armed forces, and in the production of other essential war items, such as synthetic rubber." Faust also called for salvaging grease and fats from Christmas and New Year Day meals, pointing out that after December 13 two brown ration points will be distributed as reimbursement for every pound saved.

Turkeys Rushed To Yanks Along Mediterranean

Algiers, Nov. 24 (AP).—There will be turkeys aplenty tomorrow for hundreds of thousands of American troops in the Mediterranean theater, many of them for the second time observing the historic holiday overseas.

The Army has made every effort to see that front-line troops in Italy get the lion's share of the turkey supply, but an unofficial survey indicated the big majority from Casablanca to Tunis also will get a chance at white meat or drumstick.

The Air Force saved the day for many by flying 68 tons of cold-storage birds on emergency delivery from a ship which docked far from the area in which they were to be distributed. Planes of the Troop Carrier Command flew them from the harbor to the Tunisian field, where refrigerated trucks met the planes and rushed off packed full of fat birds.

Special religious ceremonies are scheduled throughout the theater.

In Algiers the holiday will have an international flavor, for the WACS are holding open house for Allied servicewomen to show their English and French allies what an American Thanksgiving is like.

Chinese Army Asks Gas Retaliation

Chungking, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Chinese Army organ, Sao Tang Pao, appealed to President Roosevelt today to remind Japan that he meant business when he threatened retaliation in kind against any Axis power employing poison gas.

The appeal followed a Chinese high command allegation that the Japanese have been using poison gas extensively in central China. It was learned, however, that no official communications on the issue have been addressed thus far to either the United States or British governments.

Tampa Newspaper Tax Ruled Unconstitutional

Tallahassee, Fla., Nov. 24 (AP).—The Florida Supreme Court today ruled that a City of Tampa license tax against newspapers, based on volume of circulation, was unconstitutional because it impaired freedom of the press.

The Tampa Daily Times and the Tampa Tribune had joined in attacking an ordinance imposing annual license taxes ranging from $40 to $700. The newspapers claimed the ordinance was discriminatory and the tax was imposed without regard to any reasonable classification, as required by the Constitution.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Capt. John Welchel, the four-striper who coaches the Navy football team, was a very absorbed spectator the other day when the Redskins stopped the Bears' T-formation. Welchel has ideas of stopping the T-formation, himself, no less distant than Saturday afternoon when he sends his Navy lads against West Point.

POVICH

He saw the Redskins use both a five and six-man line against the Bears' T, with Center George Smith calling the defensive signals, shuffling the line to meet the circumstances of the down and the yardage needed. But fundamentally he saw the Redskins stop the Bears by outcharging them in the middle, rushing their passer and floating the two ends. It was nice to know the T-formation could be licked that way.

Navy will take the field as the favorite to beat Army on Saturday and even Welchel, who belongs to the moaning school of coaches, says "It looks like a toss-up.'" Army and Navy have had two common foes this year, Notre Dame and Penn, and off those games the Middies rate some kind of an edge. The Notre Dame team that licked Navy, 33-6, beat Army 26-0, but against Penn, which held Army to a 13-13 tie, Navy got home nicely, 24-7.

There is one disturbing note, for Navy, though. The Middies' running game against Notre Dame was completely impotent and wound up with an 11-yard deficit for the afternoon while a week later Army gained almost 150 yards in its rushing game against the Irish. Navy, however, was dedicated to a passing attack against Notre Dame from the outset and was without the valuable ball-carrying services of Bob Jenkins, who is now ready for Army.

Army, which installed the T-formation this year, has had no reason to regret it, with Notre Dame it's only conqueror. And except for its fumbling in the contest with the Irish, Army might have held Notre Dame to a mere one-touchdown margin. But those fumbles go hand in hand with a team using the T-formation for the first year, and Coach Earl Blaik expected them. The T multiplies the ball handling and leaves a far greater margin for error.

Whelchel is a proponent of the tried and proven single-wing which may not have the deception of the T but develops more power in any selected spot. Strangely, though, Navy has not always been a power team this year, with Babe Hamberg's passes keynoting its attack. However, with Jenkins available the Middies are in a position to diversify their attack for the Army game. Whelchel has four starters from the team that beat Army last year, and six men who were substitutes on that squad.

Navy took on the appearance of a powerhouse team in the Penn game, but there were moments when Army looked unstoppable against Notre Dame. Saturday's game will offer up a contest of clever backs, Hamberg and Jenkins of Navy, and Glenn Davis, the Army plebe. At times in the Notre Dame game, when he wasn't fumbling, the flashy Davis looked like the best back on the field, barring not even Johnny Lujack, Creighton Miller or Jim Mello.

Both teams are coming up to Saturday's pay-off as improved clubs. Navy has had a two-week rest during which Whelchel has been able to bear down on tactics, and Army geared itself for Saturday's game with that 50-0 victory over Brown last week. Each succeeding week has brought Army more familiarity with the complexities of the T-attack.

Army would seem to have more depth in the backfield than Navy. The Middies' scouts have brought back fat sheafs of notes on George Maxon, Max Minor, Tom Lombardo and Carl Anderson who may comprise Army's best backfield in years, along with Davis.

In the battle of the lines, where the game will doubtless be decided, Navy is equipped to combat Army on equal if not better terms. The Middies have a magnificent brace of 215-pound tackles in Don Whitmire and Ed Sprinkle. Whitmire has long been recognized as an outstanding tackle and Sprinkle has gained more admirers with every contest. Joe Stanowicz and Frank Merritt are the Army tackles, as big as Navy's.

It's aa new day in Army-Navy football, incidentally. Time was when either team was cautious from the outset, willing to play for the breaks, get a touchdown lead and sit on it. But both teams are modeled on scoring lines this season. One touchdown, or two, isn't very apt to win the ball game. That's our only prediction.

Redskins Setting Up Defense For Zimmerman in Eagle Game

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman began setting up a defense yesterday for Roy Zimmerman, of all people, who was traded off as excess baggage at the beginning of the season after a bad night in the College All-Star game in Chicago.

Zimmerman happens to play in the same spot for the T-formation minded Phil-Pitt Eagles, who play the Redskins here Sunday, as does Sid Luckman for the Chicago Bears. Zimmerman handles the ball on every offensive play from center to his ball-carrying backs, kicks and passes.

Luckman had his bad day of the year here last Sunday when the Redskins put an awful dent in Columbia Sid's fancy passing average. Zimmerman has also had a particularly bad day, against New York when the Giants roughed and rushed him and had 42 points before the Eagles scored.

Zimmerman had a pretty good day against the Redskins, however, passing to one touchdown in the 14-14 tie and kicking both extra points, although one of his kicks was blocked for a Redskin touchdown.

Good Day Against Lions

The former San Jose State halfback, coached in college by the Redskin spotter, Dudley DeGroot now of Rochester, and cocoach of the East All-Stars in the annual Shrine game, probably had his best day of the season last week when the Eagles beat the Detroit Lions, 35-34.

Zimmerman had a hand in all five touchdowns and excelled under pressure. He passed to two touchdowns, scored another on a sneak and kicked all five extra points. Zimmerman missed one extra point but a Detroit offside gave him another chance and he came through.

Eagles Cocoaches Greasy Neale and walt Kiesling had the makings of a good pro ball club but lacked a "brain.", the all-important quarterback before the Redskins obliged by trading Roy for Ken Hayden and Jack Smith.

Away from the Redskins and rid of his inferiority complex as Sam Baugh's shadow, Zimmerman produced from the start for the Eagles. He was the big man as the Eagles opened with a 17-0 victory over the Dodgers and played a major role in a 28-14 triumph over the Giants.

The Eagles were overmatched against the Bears and lost, 48-21, and the Giants gave Zimmerman his worst drubbing of the season in a 42-14 triumph. He came back the following week in top form, however, as the Eagles drubbed the Chicago Cardinals, 34-13.

Little Over a Third

Zimmerman had the help of a line which pushed the Redskins back into Baugh's lap in the Philadelphia game before the Quaker City's largest pro crowd, but he was injured late in the game and played only five minutes as the Dodgers upset Phil-Pitt, 13-7. He was in good shape last week, however, as the Lions will attest.

Zimmerman has passed 99 times and completed 34 for 8 touchdowns, but like Luckman, Roy goes in for the long shots and, although he has completed only a little over a third as many passes as Baugh, his yardage is well over half as much as Sammy's.

In kicking, where Zimmerman has never overcome the handicap of taking four steps forward, which leaves him open for blocked kicks, he has averaged better than 35 yards in 35 attempts. He has missed only one point-after-touchdown and has kicked one field goal in four attempts.

Zimmerman made few friends in three years with the Redskins, although he visited the 'Skin dressing room in Philadelphia and shook hands with most of the players. The report was the Redskins were "out to get him," but he took care of himself that day, with the help of an inspired Eagle line which afforded ample protection.

Zimmerman would call it his happpiest day in football if he could beat the Redskins in Washington before his college coach, who will be working against him, but who always predicted a great future for his star protege.

Redskins fans did not see Zimmerman at his best—in practice. His booming voice supplied most of the chatter which former Coach Lieut. Ray Flaherty insisted upon. His kicks often hit 80 yards and his passes were perfect, but in a ball game he was a sorry replacement for Baugh. With the Eagles he's a different fellow.

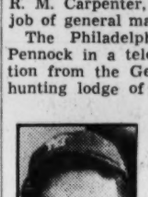
Has Yawkey's Approval

Herb Pennock Offered Job As Phillies' General Manager

Philadelphia, Nov. 24 (AP).—Herb Pennock, former New York Yankee whom Connie Mack once called "baseball's smartest pitcher," was quoted tonight as saying he had been "approached" by Robert R. M. Carpenter, jr., new president of the Phillies, and offered the job of general manager.

The Philadelphia Record said Pennock in a telephone conversation from the Georgetown, S. C., hunting lodge of his present employer, Boston Red Sox president, Tom Yawkey, added that "I don't expect to make a decision until after thinking over the matter for a few days."



PENNOCK

"Mr. Yawkey knows of the offer and has given me permission to join the Phillies or rather to better myself in any way, for which I am very grateful to him," Pennock was quoted as saying. "I am also grateful and greatly flattered that I have been approached by Mr. Carpenter."

To Confer Next Week

The Record said Pennock, now general manager of the Red Sox farm system, would leave Yawkey's lodge Monday and planned to confer with Carpenter, probably on Wednesday, in Wilmington, Del., or New York.

Carpenter, asked about reports that Pennock would be offered the job, said earlier he couldn't talk about it because the man he had in mind "is under contract."

The new president of the Phillies laid down a two-point policy program which—he hopes—will shake the National League problem team loose from the game's worst case of year-in-year-out losing.

The husky scion of the Wilmington, Del., duPonts, who hopes for a winning team in three years, said he would:

A. "Consult Mr. Mack."
B. "Leave my manager alone."

Carpenter is a close friend of Connie Mack of the Athletics, which has a working agreement with the minor league team that Carpenter also heads, the Wilmington Blue Rocks of the Interstate League. He has been in the habit of consulting Mack on baseball problems and hopes to continue.

What Would Landis Say?

"Of course," he said, "now that I'm heading a bill club myself, Judge Landis, the baseball commissioner, might not approve of such a procedure, but Mr. Mack's wise head has helped me out many a time when I had a tough proposition to solve."

As for point B, Carpenter averred:

"One thing you can rely on—I'll leave the manager alone to run the club without interference from me or anybody else. My policy is that the team manager is undisputed boss two hours before the game and two hours after the game. I'll never second-guess him; he stands or falls on his own ability."

"By golly," said the 1937-38 Duke football star, "you never saw anybody sitting beside Coach Wallace Wade in a football game."

'Skins Take League Lead For Defense

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP).—As a by-product of their 21-to-7 upset of the Chicago Bears last Sunday, the Washington Redskins today own the best defensive record in the National Football League, having supplanted Phil-Pitt, which won a 35-to-34 scoring spree with the Detroit Lions.

Holding the powerful Bears to 89 yards on the ground, the Redskins now have limited opponents an average of 199.7 yards in each of their seven games. And the Bears themselves have overtaken the Steagles with an average yield per game of 217.7 yards to Phil-Pitt's 219.2.

The Steagles still lead in rushing defense, however, with a 70-yard average compared with the Redskins' 79.7. Though the passes of Sammy Baugh and George Cafego spelled the Bears' doom last week, the Chicagoans maintain their leadership in passing defense. They've yielded a meager 98 yards per game, while the runner-up Washingtons have allowed 120.

Bears' Margin Narrowed

Offensively the Bears and the Green Bay Packers hold the No. 1 and No. 2 spots as they did a week ago, although the Bears' margin has narrowed. The Chicagoans, who last week had an average of 421.3 yards gained per game, now lead with a 400.6 figure, while the Packers boosted their game average from 334.3 to 341.4 yards.

Despite the trimming by Washington, the Bears also remain at the top in rushing and passing with average gains per game of 161.3 and 239.2 yards, respectively. But Phil-Pitt, with a 160-yard average, displaces Green Bay for runner-up honors in rushing, and the Packers nose out the Redskins for second place in passing.

The Bays, who smothered the Bdooklyn Dodgers, 31 to 7, last Sunday, completing 11 aerials for 270 yards, possess a game average of 200.6 yards through the air.

'Skins Claim Completions

Their feat was not good enough, however, to disturb the Redskins' and Bears' dominance in percentage of completions. Washington clings to first place in that department with a mark of .538, and the Bears are second with .514. Green Bay's average is .457.

Washington's consistent excellence in punting keeps the Redskins on top for that honor with an average distance per kick of 44.4 yards, and Detroit, which has completed its schedule of 10 games, finished with a 41.5 figure—good for second place.

The team leaders:

Total yards gained per game—Chicago Bears, 400.6; Green Bay, 341.4.

Yards rushing per game—Chicago Bears, 161 3; Phil-Pitt, 160.

Per cent of passes completed—Washington, .538; Chicago Bears, .514.

Opponents' yards per game—Washington, 199.7; Chicago Bears, 217.7.

Opponents' yards by rushing per game—Phil-Pitt, 70; Washington, 79.7.

Opponents' yards by passing per game—Chicago Bears, 98; Washington, 120.

Punting average—Washington, 44.4; Detroit, 41 5.

First Baseman Joe Kuhel

First-Sacker Comes Back After 6 Years

By Shirley Povich

Six years after he was traded away by the Nats, First Baseman Joe Kuhel returned to the Washington club yesterday, reclaimed from the White Sox for the $7500 waiver price.

The 37-year-old Kuhel was placed on the market by the White Sox following their acquisition of First Baseman Hal Trosky from Cleveland. Six other American League clubs evinced no interest in acquiring him before he was claimed by Washington.

With the White Sox last season, Kuhel's batting average was a feeble .212 and he has failed to bat more than .250 in the last three seasons. However, he has always been pestiferous to Washington pitching.

Kuhel Is Fancy Fielder

Kuhel has been one of the league's fanciest-fielding first baseman since coming up from Kansas City in 1930 and was a valuable .300 hitter in three of his big league seasons. With the Nats, he will replace Mickey Vernon who last month was inducted into the Navy leaving the Washington club with rookie Ed Butka as its only first baseman.

Owner Clark Griffith has rued for years the deal that sent Kuhel to the White Sox before the 1938 season in exchange for slow-footed Zeke Bonura—an even swap. The Nats have never had adequate first base protection since that trade.

His acquisition gives the Nats another base-stealing threat and power hitter. Despite his 37 years, Kuhel is still one of the fastest men on the bases in the league, and until last season, when he encountered an inexplicable slump, he was known as an extra-base hitter with left-handed power. He hit 27 homers for the White Sox in 1940, when he batted .280.

Kuhel originally was bought by Griffith for a $65,000 cash purchase price from the Kansas City club late in 1930. He was the sensation of the American Association that season, batting .372 and causing Scout Joe Engel to turn in such a glowing report that Griffith made his record outlay for a player.

Farmed to Baltimore

The Nats farmed Kuhel to the Baltimore club for a few weeks at the outset of the 1931 season, but quickly recalled him. He was installed as the regular first baseman by Manager Walter Johnson, who also had available the veteran Joe Judge and Art Shires.

Kuhel was a potent factor in the Nats' pennant triumph of 1933, when as a sixth-place hitter he pounded out an impressive average of .321 and batted in 118 runs. He qualified as the league's leading first baseman that year, topping the league in putouts.

Kuhel never batted less than .282 for the Nats in seven seasons, but Griffith in a quest for more power, trade him for Bonura in 1938. Bonura flopped, and two years later Kuhel ironically hit the 27 home runs that tied the record for the most homers hit in a single season by any White Sox player in history.

Pointers Resort to Voodoo To Fix Navy With a Hoodoo

By Sid Feder

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 24 (AP).—A Navy Midshipman was lynched at the U. S. Military Academy today—and the evidence is hanging right out in the middle of the Cadet dormitory area for anyone to see.

All right—so it's only a dummy dressed up in a Middie uniform and "strung up" with a rope as thick as your wrist. As the most startling exhibit of the annual Bedsheet Art Gallery the Cadets hang out the week of the Navy game, it furnishes a hair-raising idea of just what the Army student body feels the West Point footballers are going to do in Saturday's pocket edition of the service scramble. The boys are really heated up.

Rembrandt Needn't Worry

The "art" is just as fancy as ever. If anything, the upper classmen have had the lower class students dig up more sheets than usual for them to decorate and flap from their bedroom windows. And as usual, the budding soldiers show with their gags and cartoons that they're just as handy with the pen as the sword—even if their "art" won't cause Rembrandt to try a comeback.

For instance, there's one fancy sheet flapping in the breeze showing a Jap battleship blasted wide open and about to sink beneath the painted waves. Naturally, this is labeled, "They can do it to the Japs—but not to Army."

Then there's a fellow in an Army football uniform, with a small doll, bottom-side up, across his knee. He's giving it the same high-handed treatment pop used to dish out when he caught you smoking cornsilk out behind the barn. Of course, the doll couldn't be tagged anything but "Navy."

To Shores of Tripoli

A hard-looking sergeant, surrounded by jungle, is on his knees, his rifle and helmet beside him, in another.

". . . and, please, God, we want to beat Navy; Amen," he prays under the title, "In Foreign Fields."

A bomb-shaped football, with "A-R-M-Y" printed across it, is dropping onto a "Navy" submarine on another canvas, and a small rowboat which has been christened "Navy" is about to be swallowed up by a giant wave—"Army Tide."

What's more, as they await the naval invasion Saturday, the Cadets feel their footballers really have it this time—and they don't care who knows it. They march from building to building, from class hall to class hall and from mess hall to quarters, singing the Army football songs. In fact, "On Brave Old Army Team" is making the trees rock back and forth here at the Point this week.

St. Johns' Tops Devitt Prep by 20-to-7 Score

St. John's College prep school won a blistering game from Devitt Prep, 20-7, at Anacostia Field yesterday, and the game was much less lopsided than the score.

After a mid-field stalemate for most of the first period, Tommy Hughes of the Johnnies intercepted a pass and ran 50 yards for the first score. It was another interception, by Hughes this time, that set up the section touchdown in the next period. After taking that one on the 35, St. John's marched down the field for Bauman to buck over. Hughes place kicked.

Devitt's only score came in the second period when Thomas blocked a St. John's punt and Book picked it up, to run 40 yards and over. Slaughter's kick was good.

Bauman starred again in the fourth period when he intercepted the third St. John's pass and did the bulk of the carrying from the 30 to the goal line.

American U. Cagers to Open Season Dec. 2

The American University basketball team, whose season opens on December 2 with an encounter with the Bridgewater quintet on the floor of the A. U. gymnasium, plans to share top billing with various service teams at home games.

The university has made arrangements for a double-header schedule for all 12 home games with service teams playing the second engagement.

Cooperating enthusiastically with the idea, the social committees of the school announced today that dances will follow the games with members of the service teams as guests of the university.

The basketball schedule of the university this year includes nine conference games with Bridgewater, Washington College, Loyola, Johns Hopkins, Gallaudet and Catholic University.

Highlighting the nonconference schedule are games with all branches of the armed forces. The university five will meet the Navy Thunderbolts on December 8, the Army War College on January 29, the Quantico Marines on February 12 and the Bolling Field All-Star team on February 28, all games to be played in the American University gymnasium. On February 9 they will play the crack United States Coast Guard team at Baltimore.

Coach Clarence L. Sheffer and his team are looking forward to one of the most interesting schedules in several years.

Barry Crawford Classed Expert Rifleman by NRA

Barry Crawford, 16, of 1609 31st st. nw., has been awarded the expert rifleman rating of the junior division of the National Rifle Association and now is rated on a par with the finest rifle marksmen in the country.

Only a relatively small number of junior riflemen have gained the expert award this year, though thousands compete every month in the NRA medal series. To win the rating, Barry had to prove his ability in standing position, using standard NRA 50-foot targets on which the bull's-eye is smaller than a .22 caliber bullet and average at least 80 per cent accuracy.

Next and final award Crawford can hope to achieve is the distinguished rifleman gold bar.

Frosh, 2 Vets Named on 'All' Big Six Team

Kansas City, Nov. 24 (AP).—A freshman and two men playing their fourth year of college football landed berths on the 1943 Bix Six All-Star team selected today by coaches and newspapermen.

The first-year man was Alfred Anderson, 215-pound Missouri tackle. The veterans were Bob Brumley of Oklahoma, Navy chief specialist who had three years of experience at Rice and Don (Bull) Reece, 240-pound fullback playing his fourth year at Missouri.

Brumley was one of six members of the championship Oklahoma team awarded first team berths. Missouri placed three and Iowa State and Kansas one apiece. For the first time since the inception of the conference, Nebraska failed to land a man on the first team.

The selectors displayed a difference of opinion on many of the positions. Injuries and the transfer of naval players made it difficult to judge the respective merits of some of the candidates.

For example, Hal Crisler, Iowa State end; Bob George, and Bob Carson, Kansas backs, and Leon Pappas, Missouri guard, had only abbreviated careers in the conference. Bill Dellastatious of Washington, D. C., Missouri's fine halfback, was injured in the Oklahoma game and didn't play against Kansas. Lee Kennon, Oklahoma's 205-pound tackle who was named on the team, didn't play against Missouri and the same situation surrounded W. G. (Dub) Wooten, Sooner end. Kansas' best lineman, Junius Penny, was another casualty.

The selections:

Wiese, who was the leading ground gainer for the Wolverines as a fullback in 1942, played quarterback most of the past season while Bill Daley, Minnesota star, performed at his old position.

Four Navy Linemen Reported Ailing

Annapolis, Nov. 24 (AP).—Navy football hopes were given a setback today with the report from Capt. John E. Whelchel, head coach, that four of his best linesmen were on the sick list because of colds.

Knocked out of practice were towering Center Jack Martin, Left Guard George Brown, Right Guard Ben Chase, and Don Whitmire, left tackle and former Alabama star who made the 1942 all-American Associated Press team.

The balance of the Middie squad, however, went through only light drills, today with the practice more of a limbering-up session than anything else.

Lineups:
Army.	Position.	Navy.
McKinnon	L.E.	Channell
Merritt	L.T.	Whitmire
Murphy	L.G.	Brown
Mysliwski	Center	J. Martin
McCorkle	R.G.	Chase

Godoy May Fight Again

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 24 (AP).—Arturo Godoy, Chilean heavyweight fighter, may box again in the United States. His manager, Luis Porto, said today James Johnston of New York had offered to arrange fights in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia. Al Weill, former manager of Godoy, also has made offers, Porto said.

The Turkey Picks Penn, Texas, Colgate

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Just in cas eyou were unlucky enough not to get a turkey for Thanksgiving we give you these final football predictions on which to chew:

THANKSGIVING

Texas over Texas A. and M.—the Southwest Conference title and the right to play in the Cotton Bowl hinge on this result but we can't see where even the Aggies venerable and mythical "twelfth" man can help them this time.

Pennsylvania over Cornell—Cleo Calcagni, Penn's captain-elect for the present season, is Cornell's best tackle and is determined to beat his old mates—but his ambition will be denied by Mr. Robert Odell.

Tulsa over Arkansas—Arkansas' Leon Pense is perhaps the most versatile player in the country but he is no match for Clyde LeForce and Maurice Wade.

Franklin and Marshall over Bucknell—The diplomats to end their season undefeated.

Colgate over Brown—Brown has the better backs but the all-round strength and the victory belongs to Colgate.

St. Mary's over Utah—Not much difference.

SATURDAY, NOV. 27

Navy over Army—The Cadets need a fast, dry field to win and even then the Midshipmen's strong line and powerful ends probably would be too much for Army's swift but light backs.

Notre Dame over Great Lakes—From their 14 to 13 experience with the Iowa Seahawks last weekend, the Irish know that Sailors can be mighty tough. Armed with that experience, Notre Dame should round out its first unbeaten season since 1930.

Randolph Field over Southwestern Louisiana Institute—It is reported that Glenn Dobbs' passing is so accurate he can brush a fly off the cross bar 30 yards away. With that in mind, the Flyers—even if the fabulous Alvin Dark is in the Louisiana line-up.

Georgia Tech over Georgia—Eddie Prokop is far too good.

Southern California over UCLA—The Trojans will be out to defend their Rose Bowl selection.

Del Monte Pre-Flight over California—Too much experience in Del Monte's favor.

Finishing in a hurry—Thursday: Wake Forest over South Carolina; VMI over Maryland; North Carolina Pre-Flight over North Carolina State. Saturday: Oklahoma over Nebraska; Texas Christian over Southern Methodist; Southwestern of Texas over Rice; North Carolina over Virginia; Camp LeJeune over Jacksonville Naval; Rutgers over Brooklyn; LaFayette over Lehigh; Okla. Aggies over Denver.

Romney Rex Captures Crain Purse

Stewart Colt Wins Easily At Marlboro

By Walter Haight

Marlboro, Md., Nov. 24.—Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Romney Rex, winner of two races at Garden State Park, turned in his third success of the year today in the Crain Highway Purse, featuring the midweek program here in Prince Georges County. The 3-year-old son of Wise Counsellor galloped into the wire with daylight to spare and in front of a photo for second place money taken by Bob Hall's Partido from Mrs. George Campbell's Ecomint. A field of seven competed in the test of 5½ furlongs and Apprentice Jockey J. Pannell put up a good ride on the winner.

Romney Rex in adding $475 to bring his earnings for the year to $3180, returned a $5.20 mutuel while operating in the role of favorite. A return of spring-like weather served to draw a crowd of 4500. The racing strip was as fast as it ever will be.

Pannell hustled Romney Rex to the front from the outside post position. The Wise Counsellor youngster shook off an early threat from Ecomint and then drew out to coast to the wire. Partido had slight trouble early and closed boldly to take the place award.

The daily double shrunk to a mere $9.70. Two favorites won the key races, Pal taking the first event at odds-on, and Market Place winning the second.

Post time for tomorrow's Thanksgiving Day program will be 1 p. m.

Jockey George Acosta was turned down for the Army due to numerous injuries suffered during his riding career . . . Benny Leggett, the apprentice rider who piloted his first winner aboard John's Buddy here is a Washington boy under contract to Earl Johnson . . . Johnson's son, Dick, is overseas and has written his father to send a picture of John's Buddy winning . . . When the horse did win the track photographer was absent . . . The Maryland Racing Writers Association will hold its election of officers at a dinner in George Perry's Marlboro Hotel Friday night . . . For the first time daily double tickets will be sold in the Clubhouse at Charles Town during the meeting opening on Monday . . . Post time for the first race will be 1 p. m. . . . The person referred to as "Bars" Sager in these lines yesteday really is "Chicago Bears" Sager . . . Dave Becker, member of the official family at several tracks, died yesterday in Baltimore . . . Jockey Willie Rudert was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for unsatisfactory riding in the first race today . . . He was abroad Queen Minatoka and the filly finished third.

Race Board Defers Hearing for Jones

Baltimore, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission announced today that a hearing for Owner-Trainer F. C. Jones of Washington, originally scheduled for today, had been postponed until Tuesday, November 30.

The commission announced on November 17 that direct signs of a drug had been found in a saliva test taken after the horse Appeal Agent, owned by Jones, won the first race at Pimlico on November 11.

A spokesman for the commission said today that the postponement had not been asked for by Jones.

Fletcher, Pittsburgh First Sacker, Called

Pittsburgh, Nov. 24 (AP).—Elbie Fletcher, Pittsburgh Pirates' first baseman, notified the club today he had passed his final physical examination and would be inducted into the Navy next Tuesday. He wrote from his home at Milton, Mass.

Little Generals-GW High, Tech-Wilson Top School Card

By Tom Moore McBride

The gridiron connoisseurs who always want to see best game of the day are faced with a toss-up today as to whether they'll watch the Washington-Lee Generals invade Alexandria to take on the George Washington Generals or whether they'll make it Central Stadium where Tech and Wilson play off their tie for second place.

But come to think of it, a little shuttling back and forth across the river would permit them to take in both games, for the annual Old Oaken Bucket clash at Alexandria comes off at 10:30 a. m ,and the interhigh meeting is at 2:30.

In the former it will be a resumption of a long rivalry, and the Presidents believe it will be the turning point in their three-year series of defeats at the hands of the Little Generals. Coach Rusty Doran reported yesterday that De Arcey Campbell, his kicking end, is out with a broken leg, but the passing combination of George Boteler to Joe Hensley, the other end, will be there clicking.

W-L Once Beaten

Up Arlington way, however, Coach Harry Deming has other ideas. His powerful team has lost only one game, to Coolidge, 20-7, and the fact that the Generals beat the Colts, 6-0, doesn't discourage him at all. With his big threat Billy Earl in the backfield along with Myron Gerber, the game looks good to him.

It won't be an upset either way.

Gene Emsweller's talented to may mean the difference in the Wilson game, for the two teams seem to be just about as evenly matched as when they met earlier in the season to battle to a 0-to-0 tie. It was Emsweller's extra point that brought victory for the Trainers in their hard fought game with Central, his first appearance on the field since he broke his collarbone in the first game of the season

Tech's T formation game has improved with every game and the Manual Trainers will be just a week better than they were on their last outing against Roosevelt, but the Wilson line is something else again and the T spearhead may be plunted on that tough forward wall. Coach Duke Jacobs believes his light squad had enough tricks up its collective sleeve to turn the trick, however.

Wilson Coach Joe Carlo's problem is how to plug his backfield losses of Pearce Godfrey and Russell Keith, plus a line hole occasioned by Tackle Tom Brewer's illness. But if Wilson is anything it is a good defensive team, even without Godfrey's kicking, and Carlo by this time probably has figured out the answer to the $64 "T" question and passed on the solution to his Tigers.

Winner of the game will meet Coolidge in the championship playoff at Central Stadium Tuesday.

Mae Young Meets Mae Weston at Turner's Tonight

Mae Young, "Blonde Bombshell" from Oklahoma who last week engaged in a riotous match with Rose Evans, returns tonight to Turner's Arena to meet Mae Weston, Chicago wrestler, in the cofeature bout.

Maurice LaChappelle and George Macricostas will share the spotlight in a finish match.

The Black Mask, hooded grappler, will face Ed (Strangler) White, former Alabama University footballer, in a special 30-minute match.

Other bouts, the first at 8:45 o'clock, find Dr. John Bonika opposing Billy Nelson and Ed Pavloski taking on Jimmy Britt, a newcomer who claims the British Army mat title.

Ernie Lombardi Gets Hearing on Charge of Assault

San Francisco, Nov. 24 (AP).—Ernie Lombardi, catcher for the New York Giants, pleaded innocent today to a charge of assault and battery brought by a night club patron who said Lombardi broke his nose. Municipal Judge George Harris, after hearing Wade Jones, jr., the complainant, continued the case to December 3.

Jones, Richmond electrician, testified that he, a girl and another couple had a table adjoining one occupied by Lombardi and his party at the night club the night of November 10.

He said the baseball player leaned over to him and suggested the two girls with Jones move over to the Lombardi table. Jones told the court he paid no attention, and that Lombardi then leaned on his shoulder and repeated the suggestion.

Then, he stated, he pushed Lombardi away and told him to sit down. Jones said the next thing he knew a fist glanced off his mouth and broke his nose, and a second blow struck his right eye.

Jones has filed a civil damage suit for $20,428 against the ball player.

Maryland Faces VMI At Roanoke

Richmond, Va., Nov. 24 (AP).—Duke University has staked out its claim on the Southern Conference football championship but a decision on the winner of runnerup honors awaits the outcome of two games set for Thanksgiving Day.

These windup conference scraps, both carded for netural stadiums, will send Wake Forest's civilians against South Carolina's V-12 squad at Charlotte and VMI against Maryland at Roanoke in a battle of youthful, freshman-powered outfits.

Each of the contestants except VMI has a chance to move into the position just below the powerful Duke squad in the final loop standings for 1943.

Maryland has played only one conference game, defeating Wake Forest, 13-7, in probably the biggest upset the season produced in this area. Aside from this triumph the Old Liners' season has been somewhat on the dismal side. Setbacks have been administered by Curtis Bay Coast Guard, West Virginia, Penn State, Virginia and Bainbridge. On the other side of the ledger are successes over two service teams—Richmond Air Base and Greenville Air Base.

VMI has won two conference games over Clemson and Davidson but lost in the family to Richmond and Wake Forest. Other losses have been handed the young Cadets by Temple, Virginia and Georgia.

Wake Forest enters the South Carolina game with three loop wins against the single loss to Maryland. The conquests were scored at the expense of North Carolina State, VMI and Clemson. On the outside of the circuit Wake Forest lost to Camp Davis, Georgia and Greensboro BTC and upset the Chapel Hill Navy Preflight Cloudbusters.

A victory by Maryland tomorrow would give the Old Liners first claim on runnerup honors but should Maryland lose to VMI then the winner of the Wake Forest-South Carolina tussle would move up into the second spot in the standings.

Sailor White, 'Li'l Abner' on Card at Uline's

Sailor Eddie White, knockout artist from New York, and "Li'l Abner" Powell, Negro M. P. from Aberdeen Proving Grounds, will clash in a special eight rounder on Promoter Goldie Ahearn's Monday night fight card at Uline Arena.

Featuring the card is the ten-rounder involving Washington's welterweight champ, Frankie Wills, and Ernest (Cat) Robinson in a ten rounder, backed up with an eight round semifinal in which Billy Banks, local Negro lightweight, takes on the talented Vic Creelman, New York sailor boy who has 28 straight victories to his credit.

White, a bellicose Irishman with a sock in either mitt, has compiled four straight kayoes in as many appearances here. Powell, in one show, also kayoed his foe in two rounds.

Robinson, a busy club fighter around New York, recently kayoed Vinnie Vines in two rounds and was held to a draw by Izzy Jannazzo. Wills, since losing in a tough battle to lightweight champion Bob Montgomery here last summer, has won four victories and a draw in New York and Ohio rings, his latest a 10-round decision over George "Red" Doty in Akron as a substitute for Fritzie Zivic.

Bill Slater Picks Army—NOT Navy

Signals off! Lieut. Col. Bill Slater did not predict in a speech at the Touchdown Club on Tuesday that Navy would win the Army-Navy game. He was inadvertently misquoted in Wednesday's issue of The Post.

The Post is pleased to make the correction out of deep concern for Lieutenant Colonel Slater, who throughout yesterday was under heavy suspicion by his Army officer colleagues in the Pentagon Building.

For the record, what Lieutenant Colonel Slater did say was, "Navy won't win the Army-Navy game."

Nation Pays Final Tribute To Sen. Barbour

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 24 (AP).—More than 500 persons, including Gov. Charles Edison, three former New Jersey Governors and a U. S. Senate delegation of ten, attended funeral services today for U. S. Senator W. Warren Barbour of Locust Point, who died suddenly in Washington Monday night.

Episcopal Bishop Wallace J. Gardner of Trenton conducted simple services at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in which the Barbour family held membership.

An Army color guard stood at attention throughout the services.

Burial was made in the Borbour family plot at Cedar Lawn Cemetary.

Edison and former Governors A. Harry Moore, Lieut. Col. Harold G. Hoffman and Morgan F. Larson were pallbearers.

Rep. J. W. Ditter

Ambler, Pa., Nov. 24 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover and scores of persons prominent in political and military circles were among hundreds who attended funeral services today for Representative J. William Ditter.

Services were held in Calvary Methodist Church, followed by private burial. Representative Ditter, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, was killed Sunday night in a plane crash near Columbia, Pa.

A congressional delegation included Senators James J. Davis, Pennsylvania; James G. Scrugham, Nevada, and C. Douglas Buck, Delaware. Also attending were several admirals, headed by Vice Admiral John McCain, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics. Representative Ditter was a member of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The Federal Diary

Several Agencies Hope To Close Early Today

Officials in several agencies late yesterday were trying to arrange for an early closing of their offices this afternoon. The White House work order for today still stands, but department heads have the authority to release their employes early, although, of course, they must take the responsibility for it. No matter how it's done, work on a day like Thanksgiving causes endless confusion and trouble. For example, employes in War's Corps of Engineers were told that they must make up the time any employes were given off today. However, they were told that a death in the family would be an exceptional circumstance and no leave would be charged in that event.

KLUTTZ

At Reconstruction Finance Corporation, employes were told that annual leave would be charged if they took the day off. But the comptroller general says that can't be done; that today is a legal holiday and leave can't be charged against it. It's okay with the comptroller if employes who are absent without a good excuse are docked a day's pay. But if you happen to have the whole week off you can't be charged with leave, docked in pay or required to make up the time. Amid all the confusion and resentment against working today is some small satisfaction for the employes. It's the widely-held opinion that this will be the last Thanksgiving employes will be asked to work and the holiday work order will be relaxed next year. .. ....

Pentagon employes will be compensated in part for working today. They'll get a big turkey dinner—a subsidized (that awful word) dinner for 35 cents. And the Pentagoners will be the only Federal workers to get turkey today. Welfare and Recreation hasn't the help or the baking facilities to serve turkey and the trimmin' in its other cafeterias. Moreover, the other agencies haven't a post exchange like the Army to pay the deficit at 35 cents a plate. However, the cafeteria concern has or will serve turkey in all the other restaurants during the Thanksgiving period. Several Government groups will cook their own Thanksgiving dinners tonight at various church kitchens.

James Named Durr's Aide

Ervin James has been appointed assistant secretary of Federal Communications. He has been assistant to Commissioner Durr . . . The local chapter of the International Association of Public Employment Services will meet Tuesday night in Archives auditorium . . . The Army Map Service on MacArthur Boulevard had four phone operators. One was fired and a new girl was brought in to take her place and supervise the three veterans. But not for long, the trio up and quit . . . The 15 girls in War Production Board's identification unit believe they have a most unusual office. None of them smokes . . . John Dirks of the Civil Service Commission is handling personnel temporarily for Foreign Economic Administration.

The Council of Personnel Administration is close to an agreement on the revision of the Ramspeck-Mead Automatic Promotion Act. The members—personnel chieftains in Federal agencies—all agree that the act must be speeded up but they have been fighting among themselves on how it's to be done. Now the members are reported swinging behind a plan to give a wartime in-grade raise every six months to employes who hold excellent efficiency ratings and employes with lower ratings would have to wait longer periods. It was originally proposed that "excellent" employes be made to wait a year and "good" employes two years.

Several personnel people protested vigorously against tying efficiency ratings to in-grade promotions but they were shouted down. It's generally felt that Congress would never approve any sort of a speedup that didn't reward the more efficient employes on paper, even though the employes may not be any more efficient. Thought has been given to getting the rating system simplified by giving only two grades, satisfactory and unsatisfactory, but it would take an act of Congress to do it. The law requires that four ratings be given and five are now used and the only one that could be knocked out would be "very good." So you can rest assured that no change will be even suggested to Congress.

The life of a plate printer at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing is pretty hectic. Each of the 600 printers must train three or four helpers, mostly women, a year. After the women are trained at great expense they are promoted to other jobs. A printer is given six days to train a new girl. During that period no production quota is set and the spoilage of paper money and Government bonds is charged to the Government. The printer gets his $14 a day and the helper is paid an hourly salary. But unless the printer has a pretty good girl he's apt to get docked in salary. You see, a plate printer is allowed 2 per cent spoilage and he must pay out of his own pocket all the money and bonds ruined over that amount. It isn't unusual to charge a printer $50 in a single month for spoilage, spoilage he wouldn't have if he had a good assistant.

The good old songs are still the good old songs. But the faces might be unfamiliar to the boys who howled them in quartets a war ago.

In this war, the USO has put them on photographic slides to be used for group singing in recreation huts and centers where servicemen gather during "time off." Illustrating the lyrics on the screen will be interpretive drawings by some of America's leading caricaturists, made at the request of the USO.

The artists, many themselves now in uniform, include such well-known names as James Thurber, Walt Disney, Gluyas Williams, Milton Caniff, O. Soglow, Rube Goldberg and Rockwell Kent.

Their original drawings are now on exhibit at the Library of Congress and, after a tour through the country, will become part of the library's permanent collection.

Perhaps just to bring her up to date, "The Old Gray Mare" definitely ain't what she used to be—her latest portrait by VID making her more like a surrealist Pegasus than the broken-down equine conjured up by the old saw.

Being in the Army, however, apparently is just what it used to be. Artist Lichty, for example, appropriately pictures his bejowled sergeant commenting unprintably on the war and his men. A bicycle, too, is still a bicycle, although in the old days it used to be a tandem.

Among the other songs illustrated—some sentimentally, some literally—are "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" who fed his horse on corn and beans; "Funiculi, Funiculi," "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnett" and the like—to give today's soldier boys a lift and their dads a few pangs of nostalgia.

National See May Be Set Up Here

By Robert Tate Allan

A step toward establishing a See for the Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, perhaps in the Nation's Capital, was taken yesterday in New York City.

Such a See would be an Episcopal jurisdictional and geographical area from which the Presiding Bishop would administer the duties of the national church.

Members of the "Joint Committee on a Presiding Bishop's See" met with the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop, at national council offices to discuss offers from several dioceses for use as possible Sees.

Move Is of Long Standing

According to the Rev. Clyde Brown, Washington diocesan missioner and secretary treasurer of the joint committee, who was interviewed last night upon his return from the meeting, agitation for a See, with offices and residence for the presiding bishop, has long existed.

Dr. Brown said that the October general convention authorized the joint committee to negotiate "with any diocese that may be willing to enter into some arrangement for the purpose of establishing such a See and report to the next general convention."

The general convention, it seems, ignored a specific recommendation that a "residence" be established here for the presiding bishop. But it continued the joint committee, reformed it with new members and gave it specific instructions.

As the situation now stands, Bishop Tucked will retire next June as Bishop of Virginia, and thus will be left without any official residence. The Washington Cathedral is said to have offered him quarters at the College of Preachers. His home is in Richmond, Va.

Named vice chairman of the joint committee at yesterday's meeting was Bishop Noble C. Powell of the Maryland Diocese, member of the Washington Cathedral Chapter and former dean of the cathedral.

Bishop Paul Matthews, retired Bishop of New Jersey, is committee chairman. The Rev. Herbert Donovan, rector of Christ Church, Charlottesville, Va., and Spencer Ervin, Philadelphia layman, are committee members. Chairman Matthews probably will announce another joint committee meeting at an early date, according to Dr. Brown.

Dr. Brown was one of the local clergymen nominated for new Bishop of Washington from the floor of the Diocesan Convention Tuesday.

Meanwhile, laymen and clergy of the Washington Diocese are looking forward to a visit here tomorrow of the Very Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop-elect of Washington, and dean of the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, Mass.

Dr. Dun will spend the weekend at the College of Preachers on the Cathedral Close, where the committee authorized to notify him of his election will meet him tomorrow morning. They are Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, chairman of the diocesan standing committee; Justice Owen J. Roberts, chairman of the convention nominating committee, and Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church.

Capital Fails In Troop Appeal For Musical Gifts

Despite increased pleas from Army camps, hospitals and servicemen's clubs for small musical instruments, the response in Washington has failed to produce many of those much-wanted ukeleles, flutes, guitars or even "sweet potatoes" that mean so much to a soldier's recreation.

According to Kitt's Music Shop, which is cooperating with Red Cross in collecting and distributing the instruments, not a single donation has been made of the small-sized music-makers in more than a week. A few calls for information were received, but that's all.

Music for the Services, an independent club organized here for sheet music, records and instrument collections, has had somewhat better response. And to its headquarters, in the Southwest Branch Library, have come letters of thanks from soldiers who got the piccolos, banjos, violins, etc., contributed to the club and repaired for shipment by Kitt's.

Distraught Student Ends Life in Plunge Off Bridge

Fighting off an unidentified woman who sought to stop her, Marie Louise Isabel McCabe, University of Maryland sophomore, who once won recognition as a brilliant child writer with stories and articles to her credit in newspaper and Catholic periodicals, plunged to her death yesterday from Calvert street bridge.

The girl, daughter of Clarence J. McCabe of 236 Farragut st. nw., who is an editorial writer with National Catholic News Service, had expressed concern over university studies, her father said.

She left the university at 11:15 a. m. yesterday, after taking a botany test and was believed to have taken a bus to the bridge, which is 10 miles from the university.

Her father, when called home by homicide officers, recalled that Tuesday night she had said:

"I'm afraid I'm not doing so well."

She was moody when leaving home for school yesterday, he said.

Before leaping to death the girl placed textbooks on the bridge pavement. Significantly, one of these was on mental hygiene. Notes, apparently in her handwriting, dealt with mental ills and ways of overcoming them.

Students at the university said Marie Louise was without campus friends, not because she could not have had them, for, one said, she was a friendly and attractive girl; but because she seemed to prefer to be alone.

McCabe described his daughter as knowledge hungry, and he believed, he said, her act was prompted by a desperate fear she might not be able to keep up with school work.

Coroner J. Magruder MacDonald certified the death as suicide induced by melancholia.

Death Veils Career of Girl Who Wrote Post Story at 12

Marie Louis McCabe, 19, who took her own life yesterday when she lept from the Calvert Street Bridge, had planned to become a writer. A gift for expression came "naturally" to her, she had once said, because her father wrote and his family "at least liked literature."

Determined to try her skill, she wrote numerous stories while still in her early teens—this despite the fact that before she was 9 she had never spoken English.

Marie was born in Denver, Colo., but while still a baby was taken to France, her mother's native country. It was not until she was 9 years old that her mother brought her back to America and she became a student in St. Gabriel's Parochial School at Grant Circle.

Within three months she was able to drop her French and express herself fluently in English. And only three short years later, when she was 12, Marie was able to see a piece she had written published in The Washington Post.

This was her story, "Magi's Visit to Bethlehem," a Christmas allegory published on December 24, 1936:

I fell asleep, rocked by the richly caparisoned camel on which I rode. Around us the stars and sand dunes stretched endlessly, while my father, oldest and wisest of the Magi, sat beside me.

But I was awakened by a cry from Melchoir, the black king, who was half-kneeling on his mount as he pointed to the west. A star in the skies stood motionless, shedding its beams on the domes and cupolas of a little town in the valley at our feet.

"My son, we have reached our long hoped for destination." My fahter, Gaspar, was bending his head reverently.

Suddenly a group of horsemen appeared through the stillness.

"We will guide you to the Saviour if ye seek him," they said. "For an angel appeared and said to us this night, 'Fear not, for a Redeemer is born unto you, in Bethlehem.'" And we went into the valley to seek Him.

On the outskirts of Bethlehem we entered a small abandoned stable over which the star gleamed and from which a golden radiance flowed. The floor seemed of gold, the pelts of the ass and ox near the manger of the Child changed to shining silver. Even the cobwebs were hung with glowing pearls.

Kneeling by the cradle of the Holy Babe was Mary, His Mother, her white and blue garments more beautiful than the richest brocades, while Joseph stood silently in a dark corner.

Melchoir advanced with an ebony coffer encrusted with pearls and gold, saying, "Gold have I to offer, O blessed Infant, for thou art King among men."

Then Balthasar with a silver censer, saying, "Frankincense bring I to worship Thee as Supreme Deity."

Lastly, came Jaspas, my aged father, with a golden urn. "And I have myrrh, to signify that thou art man, O blessed Redeemer, and must suffer a cruel death for the sins of mankind," spoke he, tears rolling down his wrinkled cheeks.

Then the shepherds knelt and adored, the youngest offering his pet lamp to the Infant, who laughed and clapped his baby hands in delight. And I gave my mantle to His Mother, who thanked me with her sweet smile and spread it on the poor bed of straw.

And I bade farewell to the Holy Family, and as we rode off on our patient camels the star in the west changed to a flaming red cross and slowly vanished.

"Do you believe in Santa Claus" reporters asked 12-year-old Marie when she was interviewed that day before Christmas.

"No," she had shaken her head, "I've read too much for that. But it would be such fun to be able to."

'Collapsible' War Housing Inspected

Two "demolishable" housing properties for warworkers, constructed by the National Capital Housing Authority, were visited yesterday by Chairman Burton of Ohio and Senator Capper of Kansas, representing a Senate District Housing Subcommittee, and Representatives Sasscer and Beall, both of Maryland.

The additions from the lower house were invited on the tour by NCHA Executive Officer John Ihlder because several of the projects to be inspected were in their respective districts. Because of a time limitation, however, the group was unable to see the Fairway Houses in Montgomery County, in Beall's area.

The Senators were particularly impressed with the 500-unit Calvert dwellings near Riverdale, Md., of which almost half has been reserved for workers at an airplane engineering research laboratory nearby.

Site for the development, chosen by NCHA in cooperation with the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is on land once occupied by the fifth Lord Calvert early in the history of the State.

At the Calvert homes, Representative Sasscer commented that "public housing in Maryland seems to be adequate now—surely private housing can pick up the problem without further public projects."

Of the 500 units there, about 400 are vacant in anticipation of the arrival of workers from the airplane laboratory, the Bureau of Mines and a technological institute located in the vicinity, Ihlder explained. The houses are filling steadily but slowly, he added.

The congressional party saw a similar condition at the Lily Ponds Houses, Eastern and Kenilworth aves, ne., where 40-odd families have moved into the 500-unit project. The explanation for acres of empty houses was that the Navy Yard is bringing many new employes to Washington, and that homes must be ready for them. Rents for all range from $33 to $36.

The demolishables were constructed, Ihlder told the visitors, because of a War Production Board ceiling of $3000 per unit cost on temporary housing.

November Traffic Toll Mounts to 14

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 84
Deaths this date last year 99
District total last year 108

Howard Potts, Negro, about 20 years old, of 147 Heckman st. se., died early yesterday at Casualty Hospital shortly after he was struck by an automobile while crossing Virginia ave. se. at 4th st. His is the fourteenth traffic death for this month against 11 for last November.

Police said the operator of the car was Pvt. George W. Sebastian, 32, of 517 Newcomb st. se., who is attached to the Seventh Precinct.

Sebastian said that he saw the man start to cross the street in front of him, but he was unable to stop his car in time to avoid hitting him. According to police, the impact of the striking car threw Potts in front of a taxicab operated by Fred W. Hodges, 35, of 3422 South Dakota ave ne.

Union Seeks Successor to Missing Chief

Local labors' union officials refused yesterday to speculate on the probable successor to Larry Kelly, recently expelled union head, who at present is a fugitive from a District grand jury, but said a meeting would be held by them tomorrow night at which initial steps to name a successor would be taken. The meeting will be held at 523 New Jersey ave. nw.

Police had to be called to quell a near-riot at a meeting held Tuesday night at Turner's Arena, at which Joseph V. Moreschi, president of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union of America, parent of the local union, sought to tell union members of the recent action taken by the executive council against Kelly and four others who are under investigation by the grand jury for misuse of union funds.

Cries of "whitewash" came after Moreschi said that the council had expelled Kelly and had found George Morgan, secretary of the local, G. E. Plummer, E. H. Hamilton and Joseph Speed, all union officials guilty of laxity in handling union funds.

Moreschi said the council had at first ordered the suspension of the latter four from their union offices but had later stayed the suspension pending their future behavior.

At the same time Moreschi informed the union that the right to conduct its own affairs would be returned to it under certain conditions. Conduct of the local's affairs had been taken over by the international body pending outcome of the investigation.

Vincent F. Morreala, general counsel for the International, said that the chief condition imposed on the local union was that a monthly accounting of its fiscal affairs be presented to the members and that a copy of the report be sent to the International. Another condition was that an auditing of the union's books be made every three months by a certified public accountant and a copy of this report also be submitted to the International.

The action on Kelly and the others was taken at a secret session of the executive council several weeks ago and the information forwarded to union officials. However the first formal announcement of it was made to the general membership at Tuesday's meeting.

Profits of $50,000

Moreschi told the members that since the local had joined the international body it had made $50,000 and at the present time had assets of $350,000 in addition to $19,000 worth of liquor taken over by the Government pending outcome of the Kelly case.

Kelly has been a fugitive since shortly after a District grand jury several months ago began investigating alleged misuses of union funds.

2 Plead Not Guilty To Violations Of Drug Acts

Two Negroes pleaded not guilty when arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of violating the Harrison Narcotic Act and the Drug Import and Export Act.

Arrested in a raid Tuesday night headed by LeRoy W. Morrison, agent in charge of the Washington field office, Federal Bureau of Narcotics, they are Mrs. Ada Reid, 40, of 1109 7th st. nw., and Joe Nelson, 35, of 613 L st. nw.

United States attorney that approximately $50,000 worth of liquor had been purchased by Kelly with union funds to be sold by a local night club.

Murder Trial

Brother Says Jeff Henry Was Insane

The brother of Jeffries D. Henry, 26, testified in District Court yesterday that the former policeman who was married to three women at the same time was insane around the time his legal wife, Lola, 26, was slain over a bottle of beer on April 27 in a 13th st. restaurant.

The brother, Brady Henry of 3474 Holmead pl. nw., said he would have attempted to place Jeffries in an insane asylum only "you know how hard it is to do such things."

Lawrence Frye, a guard at the

room in Gallinger Hospital where Henry was recovering a few weeks after he entered the restaurant at 1109 13th st. and, according to police, pumped one bullet into his blonde wife and another into his own chest, testified Henry on several occasions claimed someone was chasing him and that the defendant once got out of bed and began pounding his head against a radiator and wall.

"Always Unpredictable"

Policeman George S. Chappelle testified that during the last 14 years Henry was irrational.

"Henry was always unpredictable and was quite a heavy drinker. I never considered he had good sense."

Defense Attorney F. Bernard Flaherty has entered a plea of "temporary insanity" for his client, stating he was an "alcoholic psychotic."

The second woman Henry married bigamously testified again yesterday in the trial. She is Ruby D. Bittman, 20, of Marion, N. C.

She said she began to believe Henry was insane on the first day of their marriage and testified she left him after six days because she "thought he was crazy."

First Wife Testifies

Then the first wife of the former policeman was called to the stand. She is Mrs. Virginia Henry of 1919 Calvert st. nw. She has four children and divorced Henry.

She said she had lived with Henry for 12 years. She said on many occasions during that period Henry "had a fear of something—we could never learn what."

Brady Henry testified Jeff drank constantly and talked suicide in the months preceding the slaying.

The trial was adjourned by Justice Matthew F. McGuire until Monday for the holiday weekend.

New Fire Rules Established for Rooming Houses

New fire regulations for rooming houses, apartment houses, and flats were issued and effective yesterday by the District Commissioners who at the same time announced that rooming and lodging house license fees would be raised to $15.

The Commissioners ruled that rooming houses must have similar exits to those required of lodging and boarding houses and must be of fully fire-resistive construction.

Residential buildings having cooking facilities must consider each room with cooking facilities other than electrical appliances on the same basis as an apartment as far as fire protective measures are concerned.

Porches, it was said, may be a means of egress in two-story apartment houses not exceeding 30 feet in height only if they are made of fire-resistive materials.

Transoms over doors opening on public hallways in apartment rooming and lodging houses must be glazed with wire glass or entirely covered on one side with metal or with three-eighths-inch plaster board.

The license fee change raises the rooming house fee $10 and the lodging house fee $5, making them equal to that of an apartment house.

Budget Chief Calls Garage Setup Sound

By Anne Hagner

The Capital Garage, "like most new enterprises," has higher costs in its early stages and can be expected to "reduce expenses progresively as facilities reach maximum utilization," Director Harold D. Smith of the Budget Bureau declared in a letter to Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee.

Smith, whose reply to Randolph's request for complete information on the Federal Works Administration-operated garage was released yesterday, added that its facilities were "sound in procedure and should be encouraged."

FWA, he pointed out, set up a program of centralized storage and preventive maintenance for its own large fleet of motor equipment and also made its facilities available to other Government agencies.

Space for 521 Cars

It was revealed several weeks ago by FWA Administrator Philip B. Fleming that the garage, operating at an annual cost of $181,555, at that time regularly stored 280 Federal cars in space that could house 521. Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia wrote Director Smith on November 10 that he was "not fully satisfied" with Fleming's figures and asked if they included the entire cost of all persons assigned to the building for operation and service.

"I have an interest since there seems to be some suggestion that efforts are being made to fill the building with Government cars to justify its operation," Randolph's letter said.

In answer, Smith declared: "We are assured that they (the costs submitted by Fleming) do include the costs of all persons assigned to the building for operation and service, and they appear to be an accurate and reasonable presentation of the costs involved."

The director's reply continued: "It is our general conclusion that the present widespread dispersion of Federal vehicle storage and maintenance in the District is not conducive to efficiency.

Central Service Proposed

"Furthermore, the useful life of vehicles could be prolonged and ultimately operating costs could be lowered as the result of the improvement and standardization of maintenance practices that would be likely to result from such centralization.

"We discussed with FWA the establishment of a central motor vehicle service and informed the administrator that we would like to have his agency provide such a service whenever it was decided to undertake a program of that nature."

Commenting on Smith's letter, Randolph said: "If the plan cannot prove itself, the taxpaying public has a right to expect that those who initiated the plan should be the first to cancel the arrangement."

It was pointed out during Byrd Economy Committee hearings on the garage that before it was leased by FWA cars were stored there for $15 monthly, which did not include servicing.

Heavy Casualties Expected, Appeal Made for Nurses

An appeal for nurses to serve with the armed forces and to relieve a shortage that is approaching the critical stage was issued yesterday by Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commander, Army Service Forces, and by Miss Mary Beard, director of the American Red Cross Nursing Service in the current bulletin of the District Red Cross Chapter.

It was also announced that the local drive to recruit nurses is lagging 68 per cent behind its quota.

"The Army Medical Department needs nurses," General Somervell stated. "It is unnecessary for me to tell you that wounded men are going to need the ministering that only the woman nurse can give. Private duty nurses are needed by the men who will fall in battle."

In announcing that 400 new hospitals are to open up in all theaters of war during the coming 12 months to care for the increasing number of casualties, Miss Beard declared that it was a lack of understanding that has caused enrollments to fall off.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

Something to remember him by. ...His cigar.... or his sarsaparilla—
Gosh! It's the ghost! He's still there! And talking to someone!
My goodness but you startled me, O'Malley. It's such a dark night and my nerves aren't what they used to be. I'm still palpitating...

U. S. Will Send Cosmetics, Clothes to North Africa

By International News Service

A postwar fashion tip revealing that chic Parisian ladies will wear wooden soles and like them was yesterday relayed from Allied headquarters in North Africa.

Phineas Toby, member of the North African Economic Administration under the Federal Economic Administration, said on his return that the smart French women in North Africa have created a new style shoe with Moroccan leather tops and wooden or cork platform soles.

While perfectly satisfied, even smug, over their timber shoes, the mademoiselles from Rue de la Paix are vociferous in their complaints over the terrible lack of cosmetics, the FEA observer said, and lipsticks, waving fluid, powder and other essentials to feminine good-will and masculine morale are now being shipped to North Africa.

"If we want to have the cooperation of the French we must have the good opinion of their ladies," Toby said, "so we will send them the lipsticks as an important item of materiel in the war against the Axis."

Fashions Simple

The problems of keeping liberated peoples not only clothed, fed and sheltered, but also favorable to the Allies are many and complex. Learned economists must not only know that one out of every three persons in Allied-occupied territory must be given something to cover his or her bones, but also be prepared to harvest olive crops, sell the population a regimented wardrobe known as "the UNNRA fashions," and understand the quirks of ladies who want their postwar world to include a dash of lipstick.

The "UNNRA fashions" developed by the office of relief and rehabilitation operations are starkly simple, have no pockets, buttons, snaps, zips or frills, but "when you walk down the streets of Rome or Athens one of these days you won't be able to say there goes a lady gowned by UNNRA," relief officials said proudly.

Jerome I. Udell, chief of the division charged with supplying everything from underwear and shoes to overcoats and piece goods, emphasized that the relief and rehabilitation office has the lowest possible priority rating and only gets what the military and civilians don't want.

"This means," he explained, "that we have to scout around and get stuff that no one else can find any use for and try to make something of it."

Parallel Programs

The interallied governmental committee in London, and the committee of three manned by seven United States Government agencies, have worked out parallel programs of clothing requirements for Europe, the FEA division chief said, and these two programs will now be coordinated. China, which didn't figure in the London reckonings, has submitted a list of needs to the American committee which "interestingly enough" failed to mention clothing.

"Maybe they don't need any clothes" Udell said.

"Maybe they just need other things more," a member of the audience snapped.

Any extensive use of old clothing from America was abandoned early in the game, Udell said, because there wasn't enough of it around in the first place, and in the second selling the liberated people castoffs didn't do much for good will.

Hence, the "UNNRA fashions" sprang into being, and it is estimated that every third person in Europe will wear a shirt or dress sold by UNNRA and 65 per cent of them will be shod in the FEA footwear.

The immediate program calls for procuring enough clothing to cover 10 million people, Udell said, and includes getting hold of such items as one-half million mackinaws made for the defunct Civilian Conservation Corps, 400,000 pairs of trousers, rebuilt Army shoes, a million cotton blankets no one wanted, a couple of hundred thousand diapers and some lipsticks and powder that never got anywhere in the highly competitive American cosmetic market.

WOODWARD & LOTHROP
WASHINGTON, D.C.
November 25, 1943
Dear Children of Washington
—and Parents, too:
For many and many a Thanksgiving morning, Woodward and Lothrop has pictured a whole pageful of exciting toys. And, for even more years, the Christmas Toy Store has been thrillingly crammed with toys enough to place under hundreds and hundreds of Christmas trees.
But, this year — though the Toy Store sparkles with Christmas enchantment — the toys must be different. Metals have gone to war — and many woods have wartime jobs to do. And, as for my toymakers — dozens and dozens and dozens of them are in uniform now or busy with essential tasks.
So another Christmas must bring that extra-beautiful doll and that racing electric train. Games and books and puzzles and substitute toys must take their place — gaily — for all of them are packed full of fun. Come see for yourself how merry they are — and talk things over with Your friend,
Santa Claus
P.S. to Parents: Available toys are inexpensive, so — for your youngsters' Christmas — "make up the difference" with War Bonds.

MARTHA ELLYN'S HOUSEHOLD GLEANINGS

Armed Forces Needs for 'Toe Toasters' Met So Blankets Now Available for Civilians

By Martha Ellyn

Martha Ellyn

Even in this topsy-turvy world the Christmas spirit will prevail. Christmas lists have been shortened. In most instances the frou-frou presents will not be nestling under the branches of the Christmas tree. Practicality has taken over in most of the avenues of life. Even if the individual is not inspired to weed out the non-essentials, the WPB has seen to it that the manufacture of many of them has been curtailed.

Because of shortages of silverware, diamond watches, imported perfumes and many other things that delight the feminine heart, remembrances will differ from those of past years. War brides there are plenty. Many of them have set up temporary homes near camps where their husbands are stationed. Older women have curtailed their way of life while husbands are serving overseas or are away working in defense plants. The extra-extras of household decor no longer play important parts in their lives.

So if you are wondering about a practical gift that will still give the heart a flutter consider blankets. Conditions have become such that we now have a goodly supply of wool, while rayon stocks are being heavily taxed. And many manufacturers, after two years of concentration on an output of blankets for the armed services, have resumed the making of blankets for civilians. The Government has restricted the size and number of colors that can be manufactured. But if you go into the blanket department of stores you will find that you can make a selection which will be highly satisfactory and distinctive.

Your cold-blooded relatives and friends will no doubt appreciate the all-wool type of blanket. Those who don't require so much warmth will like the combination of wool and rayon or the wool-rayon-cotton ones. All are soft, attractive and resilient.

If you decide on these toe-toasting remembrances, get to your shopping now. Gifts to be mailed must be posted December 1 if Uncle Sam is to get them delivered. Even if the gifts are for home folks, shop early, for the stores will have a last-minute rush. There are always those persons who shop at the zero hour. Don't contribute to the confusion.

Here is a line-up of the type, size, color and price of blankets which this household editor found available when she went on a tour through the bed accessory departments of the stores yesterday,

Blankets now being manufactured are of one size—72 by 84 inches, because manufacturers have been restricted to these dimensions by the War Production Board. However, some stores who had large inventories of blankets have a few available in the size of 80 by 90 inches and 72 by 90 inches. These are few and far between. Although, white blankets are rarely available, there is still a splendid range of attractive colors. Not all the colors of the rainbow, are being manufactured as in peace time, but blue, green, rose, peach and cedar are available.

Other blankets made up of a combination of fibers are to be had. Some are 80 per cent wool and 20 per cent rayon; others are 88 per cent rayon and 12 per cent wool. There is a combination of 50 per cent wool and 50 per cent cotton, and still another of 25 per cent wool, 25 per cent cotton and 50 per cent rayon.

Downy blankets to provide warmth and beauty are always welcome gifts to a newlywed. The proud appraisal of this young woman shows how a practical remembrance like blankets will be received. The most discriminating taste can be satisfied for the war-time blankets are of fine quality and beautiful colors

The prices range according to the weight and the type of fiber used in making the blankets. You can find blankets all the way from $5.95 to $16.95. So if you decide to buy a blanket think it over before you go to the store, how much you want to pay, the color suitability, if you want it all-wool or a combination of fibers.

If you are interested in knowing the stores which have an attractive supply of blankets, call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, on FRIDAY, between 9 a. m. and 5:30 p. m.

This bonnie lassie will sleep like a hibernating bear because she will be as warm as toast tucked under the light, fleecy all-wool blanket

IT'S ABOUT TIME---

Argentine Studies Social Welfare

By Genevieve Reynolds

Usually, there isn't much extreme poverty in Argentina. But as the country becomes more industralized slums begin to pop up in factory areas. This is the observation of pretty, fair-complexioned Senorita Saira Arias of Buenos Aires.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

In this country by invitation of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, she is studying social welfare work in all sections of the country. For example, in St. Louis, she worked with private and public agencies as well as those of Protestant and Catholic affiliations. From there she went to Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois.

So far she has been most impressed by the Granger Project under management of the Westphalia Committee. Also, she studied social work in Canada, on the Gaspe Peninsula, in Quebec, and in other provinces.

Contrasting social conditions of the Argentine with those in the United States, Senorita Arias pointed out that her country doesn't stop with the "relief" but ministers to the cultural needs as well. For example, she works in the Municipal Bank of Loan.

There needy violinists and seamstresses apply to her for small loans. Arrangements are made whereby the musician keeps his instrument so as to be able to make a living. In return he pays a small sum in installments to the social agency.

Representing her government while in the United States, the alert senorita is compiling information on our various types of social services. When she returns to Buenos Aires, she probably will teach in the National School of Social Services. Already experienced in social welfare work of her country, she has served in the rural sections as well as in the cities. She declares that her government is determined to wipe out the mushrooming slums in factory areas before they become established.

Keenly enthusiastic about the United States, she has been looking into every phase of life. Under the guidance of the women's division, National Catholic Community Services, Senorita Arias has visited more than 45 USO Clubs. She has breakfasted, lunched, dined and picnicked with the servicemen and hostesses. In fact, she lived the life of USO members so as not to miss any angle.

A graduate of Sacred Heart Convent in Buenos Aires, she also studied to be a teacher in the Normal School. Later she took up social work after graduating from Escuela de Servicio Social del Museo Social Argentine—the first school of social service in the republic. Senorita Arias is secretary of the Association of Social Workers in Argentina and is correspondent for the Sociological and Philosophical Magazine.

Did You Know That . . . ?

Adhering to the theory that no solution to the problem of municipal government can be obtained without voting participation in Congress, the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at its last meeting passed a resolution in voiced opposition to the McCarran bill (Senate 1420) for an elective local government for the District of Columbia. At the same time, it reaffirmed its support of the Sumners-Capper joint resolution amending the Constitution by giving Congress a new power in the following manner:

"The Congress shall have power to provide that there shall be in Congress and among the electors of President and Vice President members elected by the people of the District constituting the seat of the Government of the United States in such numbers and with such power as the Congress shall determine . . ."

Also the federation went on record as supporting Senate bill 192 which favors the inclusion of qualified women in the United States delegations at any post-war peace councils and voted for organized effort to influence public opinion to that end.

Other action taken by the federation included indorsement of the bill which proposes to legislate investigation of radio to limit specifically power of the Federal Communications Commission. Furthermore, it indorsed the principle of the right of school teachers to consider all time given to teaching as accruing for retirement purposes in spite of any temporary withdrawals. The federation voted to call its indorsement to the attention of the education committee of the General Federation.

Annual Luncheon at Friendship, Navy League's Open House to Accent Capital's Thanksgiving Calendar

SEVERAL HUNDRED Washingtonians will eat turkey—or talk it—at two outstanding events on today's calendar.

Out Georgetown way, Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean will entertain a hand-picked group of Capital celebrities and a few guests from out of town at her annual Thanksgiving luncheon.

From 3 until 10 p. m., the District of Columbia Council of the United States Navy League will be entertaining at its first open house in the new headquarters and men officers' club at 1644 21st st I undertsand that headliners in the gold-braid contingent will be there full force during the official reception hours—5 to 7 p. m.—but that festivities will go on . . . and on, even after that.

Around 1700 invitations have been issued for the reception, at which admirals will be a dime a dozen—well, almost—and their families, friends and coworkers in Uncle Sam's Navy will be all over the place. A list of all the high-ranking officers who are scheduled to be on hand for the party would read like so many pages from the official Navy List—so I won't go into it here; but among those who will be somewhere near the door to extend a welcoming hand to all invitees will be Admiral Ferdinand L. Reichmuth, Admiral Clark H. Woodward, Admiral William O. Spears and Admiral T. B. Richey.

THERE'LL be a flock of pretty young hostesses, too, but I'll tell you more about that after the party is over. Right now, I want to give you a few pointers about the place itself, which probably will be so crowded tomorrow you won't notice anything unless you take special pains to do so.

The whole layout, I might say at once, is the result of imagination, coupled with superb planning. William Wadsworth Wood some time ago purchased three fine, old brick four-story houses on 21st st. and straightway made up his mind they would be ideal club headquarters. He asked Gladys Miller, noted decorator whose talent was brought to bear on transforming Blair House into the Government guest house it is today, to look over the 21st st. place, make suggestions—well, in short, to decorate it to a queen's taste . . . after he had remodeled it from cellar to attic.

The first floor of each building was cleared, partitions were removed and the three houses became a series of communicating rooms. The main entrance swings open to reveal an attractive foyer with all checkroom facilities neatly concealed behind a red damask screen. To the right of the door as you enter is the club lounge, a large circular dormer room, set off with floor-length draperies in an exquisite pattern, Hepplewhite chairs covered with red leather, two Lawson love seats, end tables and occasional chairs arranged on a soft green rug that blands with green walls.

"AN OCCIDENTAL interpretation of the Chinese influence" is the theme carried out in the dining room, where Ming horses and old English plates in Chinese motif are bracketed on the walls and where 28 guests may be seated at round, glass-topped tables. A large mirror is mounted over the fireplace and a pair of tall lamps furnish the indirect lighting.

Connecting the lounge and the dining room is the reception room, in which is featured a large built-in bookcase, but chances are almost anybody dropping in there won't linger long, as the bars adjoin, and in a word—they are something. They take up the entire first floor of the second house, and they are set off with green cotton corduroy draperies to match the splatter-dash floors. The tables have world maps inset in the tops and are plate-glass covered. A large mirror is centered over the fireplace and on the mantel are three valuable pieces of Belgian glass. The modern bar is done in black glass finish; the "gay nineties" bar looks as if it had been shipped in straight from the Barbary Coast.

There are all sorts of other attractive features in the place—European breakfast lounge, an officer's lounge—where walls are covered with a series of political cartoons of the year 1898, and of course the sleeping quarters, including 14 double rooms and five singles. Then there is an English basement, a spacious kitchen, a laundry—why, even a doctor's office and a dentist's office. It's all very complete, very attractive; an ideal home for the Navy League.

Miss Storen Is Bride Of R. E. Durrett

St. John's Church in Georgetown was the scene last evening for the marriage of Miss Mirian Louise Storen to Robert Eugene Durrett.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William H. Storen, jr., and the late Mr. Storen of Charleston, S. C., and this city. Mr. Durrett is the son of Mrs. Irene C. Bean.

Performing the 8 o'clock ceremony before an altar banked with autumn flowers and palms was the Rev. F. Bland Tucker. The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Archibald Edmonston. She was attired in a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines and shirred bodice. Her veil of old Spanish lace was caught with a tiara, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias.

Her only attendant was Miss Jean C. Jones, wearing a turquoise frock of satin and net with matching shoulder veil. She carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Corpl. T. Omer Durrett, jr., served as best man and ushering were John E. O'Connor and William H. Marlow.

A reception took place after the ceremony at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Edmonston. Upon their return from a wedding trip, the couple will make their home at the Fleetwood. Both the bride and bridegroom attended the University of Maryland.

Let's Pretend....

Everyone's coming home for Christmas, let's pretend . . . From the kitchen drift all the exciting holiday odors . . . fruit cake and brandy, mince meat pies, turkey stuffing, sweet potatoes.

In the upstairs den there are whispered conferences . . . strange little noises that might be a musical teddy bear being wrapped up, or a "mama doll" being dressed . . . or maybe a music box! In the cellar there are noises that definitely mean the platform for the tree is under way.

The big store delivery trucks come nearly every day and the closet in the guest room is bulging with the most exciting looking things. Something was wheeled into the back hall that couldn't be anything but a bicycle!

Fresh curtains have gone up all over the house. Wreaths of holly and mistletoe . . . and the biggest tree you ever saw are stacked against the garage.

There's a thick, wonderful, silent snowstorm that will make everything white and beautiful.

Let's pretend all this even if our hearts cannot feel it and our eyes cannot see it. Our lads around the world will be pretending too, so together we can all make it easier, happier, merrier Christmas.

One thing, don't pretend about War Bonds . . . they are the real lifeline, lending the money to buy the things that all our boys need. Buy them as often as you can, as many as you can, for a stake in Merry Christmases to come.

Cadets Reviewed By Lord Halifax

Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, reviewed 1450 Army Specialized Training Cadets at Georgetown University at 5:15 p. m. yesterday. Following the ceremonies on the campus he was entertained at dinner by the Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., president of the university and the Jesuit community there.

The Ambassador's visit was not previously announced and he arrived unaccompanied. But quiet as was his coming, it did not escape the attention of an American soldier. The man in uniform stepped forward and asked: "May I take your picture, my lord?" The tall thin man removed his hat and stood smiling until the camera shutter clicked and then walked through the main entrance into the university grounds.

His review of the cadets was free of military formality except for his precise salute with his hat as the colors of each group of cadets passed.

The dinner was wholly informal and no topics other than those of casual interest were discussed, the Rev. Mr. Gorman said.

Nathan Given Army Discharge For Disability

Robert R. Nathan, former chairman of WPB Planning Committee who waived his draft deferment as top WPB economist last March to joint the Army as a buck private, has been given a disability discharge, it was learned last night.

Nathan, who went through basic training at Camp Lee, Va., has spent the past five months in and out of Walter Reed Hospital because of a back ailment.

The 34-year-old 6-footer, whom WPB Chairman Donald Nelson regarded as one of his "best thinkers," was rejected for combat duty following his induction April 28 because of the back injury. He was transferred to the Office of Strategic Services and was scheduled for an overseas assignment.

Nathan said last night that he had no plans for returning immediately to Government work, but will go instead to Hot Springs, Ark., and then to California for three months for treatment.

Those Were Difficult Times Too!

BY PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATION

Abraham Lincoln set aside the last Thursday in November, 1864, as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer . . . our first Thanksgiving by Presidential proclamation. In those dark and terrible days another war engulfed the nation . . . yet the great Lincoln found cause for gratitude. We can do no less.

League Honors Marie Bankhead Owen

From Montgomery comes word that all the Alabama chapters of the National League of American Pen Women observed November 6 as Marie Bankhead Owen Day. Long interested in the work of the League of American Pen Women, Mrs. Owen has written a number of historical texts used in Alabama schools, also several novels, plays, books for children and scores of newspaper feature stories.

That Mrs. Owen, now 74, was so honored by the Pen Women is of special interest in Washington. It will be recalled that she is the sister of Senator John H. Bankhead 2d, and of the late Speaker William B. Bankhead and the daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Bankhead, sr., who represented Alabama here for 33 years.

Girl, 18, Ugly Duckling of Cultured Family, Seems Headed for Marriage With Boy Who Lacks Education or Ambition; Her Mother Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What should parents do when they see their 18-year-old daughter headed for marriage to a 20-year-old boy whose background, education and personal habits seem to be on an entirely different level? Of the boy's background little is known, except that he did not go to high school, and left his home in a nearby small town several years ago to work as a cab driver. And he has no ambition beyond that, as long as it pays well. The girl, though no mental giant, has had the advantages of a cultured home environment, a high school and business education, and now holds a good position. She is always tastidiously groomed, whereas he frequently appears for dates without a tie

The girl's early jealousy of an older sister,—who, as the first baby in the family in years, did get a great deal of attention,—was complicated by overweight and a poor complexion. But she has since overcome these defects. She doesn't seem to really love the boy; but she is grateful to him because he is the first boy to take her around,—after years of envying other girls who had dates and "steady" beaux. The boy had a spinal injury several years ago, which left him lame and more or less handicapped, and she feels sorry for him on this account. In fact, it was this condition that prompted her to grant him a first date. Meanwhile, she refuses to make friends with the few boys she has a chance to meet nowadays; and stubbornly resists our subtle (we hope) attempts to interest her in a hobby, or evening study classes, or a war activity. It is her strong domestic urge and unwillingness to see anyone but this boy that alarms the parents.

Her home is always open to young people,—friends of the children. (There is the elder sister and a younger brother). Their friends seem eager for invitations and say there is always food, fun and music at the Blanks. Music is the center of interest, as the parents are professional musicians; and all three children are ardent music lovers,—but especially this girl. The parents' friendly overtures to the boy have been consistently refused or ignored; and he has spent only two or three evenings at the house in over a year. The young couple's idea of an evening's entertainment seems to be going to the movies or to little taverns, although the girl does not drink or smoke.

THERE HAVE been no restrictions placed on the friendship, although the girl has been urged to go about more with other boys and girls. We, the parents, have no idea of "disowning" her if she marries the boy; but we do feel the cards are stacked against permanent happiness. This is a sincere attempt to present a true picture; and we hope you can find the clue to helping a good kid become a happy and contented woman. W. V. B.

Girl Feels Herself An Underdog, Too

DEAR M. V. B.: It seems to me this appeal is comparable to asking how to mix the pudding for better results, after the dish has emerged from the bake oven. Plainly the girl is handicapped as much as the boy, though in a different way, by an almost hopeless inferiority complex,—to the pernicious existence of which her family has contributed, callously and witlessly, since her earliest days. Her irresistible drift towards the boy's society may be explained on the ground that she feels relaxed and comfortable, psychologically, in relation to him,—because he, no doubt, looks up to her, as nobody else in her experience has ever done; and so invests her with that blessedly heartening feeling of being "just right" as she is, which is Article 1 in a satisfying companionship; and, also, a conviction-about-self that is indispensable to a sense of general well being.

IT SEEMS to me, too, that your headlong assumption,—at once anxious, deprecating and resigned,—that she is headed for marriage to this misfit lad, who is her first swain and the recipient of her doggedly grateful loyalty for that reason, is a further, painful, up-to-the-minute example of the family's psychological mishandling of experiences that vitally affect her. It is the manifestation of a hidden conviction, on the family's part, that she is and always has been a social drip,—lacking beauty, charm and elan,—who would eventually sell herself and the family pride short. And when that is the family's fixed inner attitude toward a child, don't think the child doesn't "get" it, intuitively, and perform almost hypnotically to confirm it,—no matter how conscientiously or vivaciously the family may strive to convey a more flattering surface impression.

They Draw Together In Outer Darkness

I DARESAY the boy and girl resist and ignore your falsely-cordial proffers of home hospitality to him, for the reason that, when in your presence, they jointly sense the weight of your masked disapproval,—with the result that the girl's habitual inferiority feelings are acutely aggravated, while his self esteem shrivels to pin-point proportions, so that their kindred impulse to be off and away is spontaneous and terrific. I imagine that your fundamental lack of appreciative warm sympathy with your gauche daughter's sensitive nature, and of involuntary antipathy toward this outlander lad whose company she favors, is doing as much to knit them together in an outcast bond of comradeship, as any natural attraction that exists between them.

AND IN VIEW of this barrier of passive repulsion that separates you from her and her oddly-chosen swain, I doubt that you can "reach" her, in the sense of influencing her against him. I believe your only chance (and a very slim one) of saving her for a better fate than the one you foresee,—of a step-down, catch-as-catch-can marriage to this unpromising suitor,—would consist in actively exercising a positive, infectious faith that life holds great things in store for her.

Parental Attitude Shapes Child's Fate

IF YOU genuinely loved her, this would be your viewpoint; and she would have your full vote of confidence that it is her destiny to be a happy and contented woman. And so believing, you would observe her current interest in this maimed boy as only a transient manifestation of her extraordinarily compassionate and democratic spirit. (Classic qualities of greatness; with "mental giant" stature not necessarily included!) If you can feel that about her, beginning now, and impart your soaring conviction to her,—by an eloquence of attitude rather than words,—you may yet reverse the tide of circumstance that your past pessimism has set in motion. M. H.

Bridges Institutes One-Man Probe of Diaper Shortage

By the Associated Press

Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire, began a one-man investigation yesterday into lend-lease shipment of diaper cloth to North Africa.

The Senator, stirred by reports on Capitol Hill that 2½ million diapers had been shipped abroad in the lend-lease program, made a preliminary check and disclosed these findings:

1. In reality, 450,000 yards of diaper cloth had been sent in one shipment to North Africa for the white population.

2. This would be enough material for 600,000 diapers, by popular measurements in this country—"if the cloth was not diverted to some other use."

In Memoriam

STONE, CLARA IRENE. In memory of CLARA IRENE STONE.
November 25, 1943.
Thirty-one years have passed, dear daughter.
Since you were called away.
How well do I remember
That sad and dreadful day.
The flowers I placed upon your grave
May wither and decay.
But the love for you, dear daughter,
Will never fade away.
Her loving mother, Mrs. Victoria Stone.

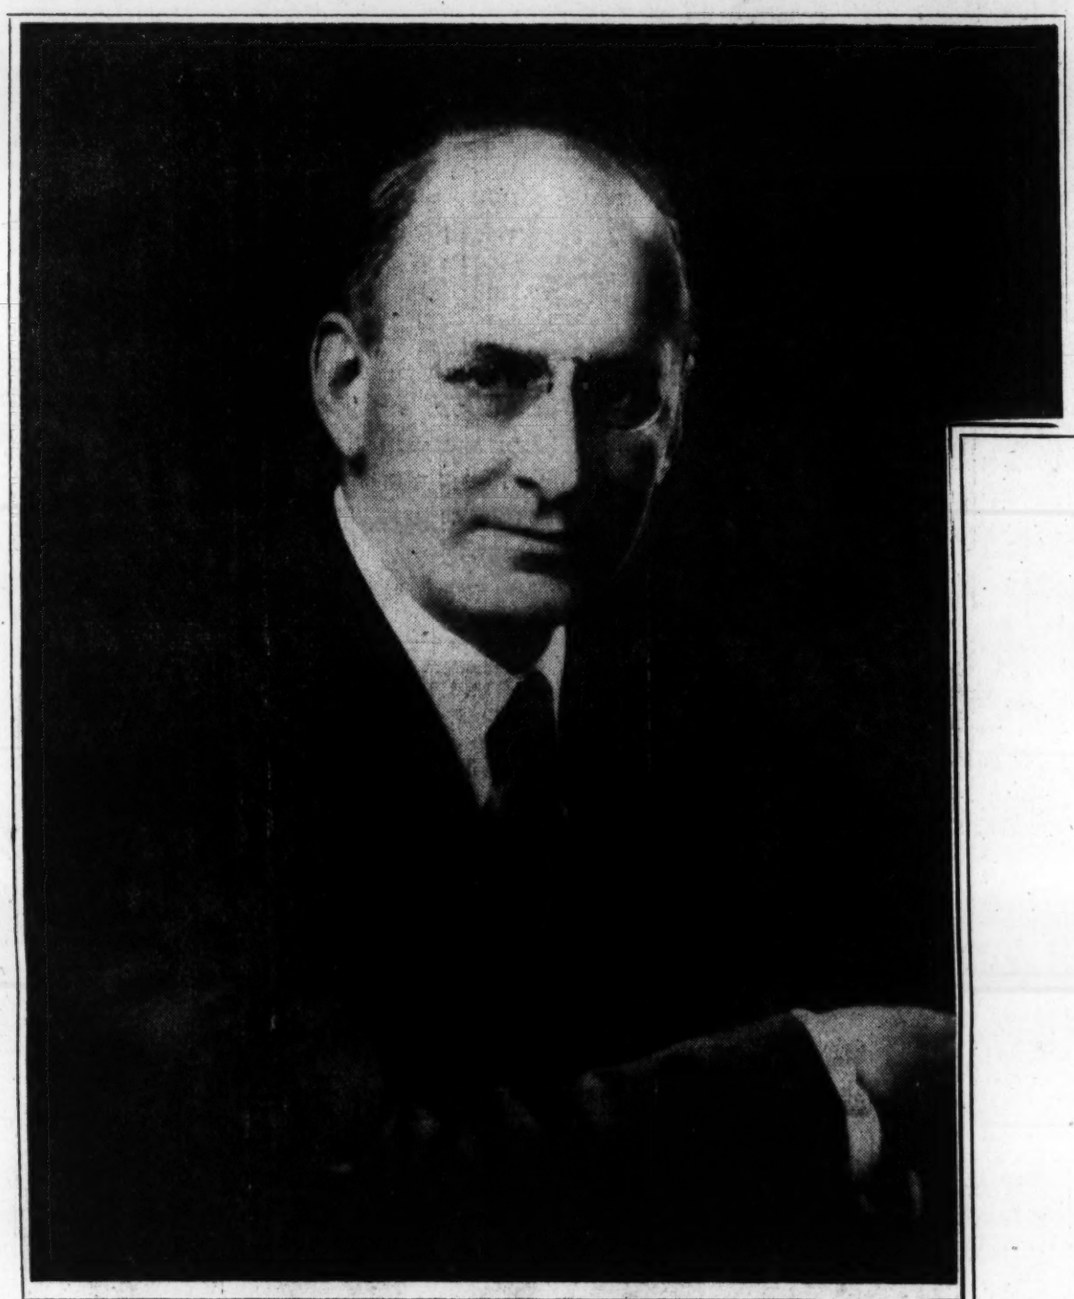
THE UNITED STATES TREASURY

INVITES YOU TO VIEW THE HECHT CO.'S

CHRISTMAS WAR BOND WINDOWS



You are cordially invited to view this unusual Christmas display, which has been created and built by The Hecht Co. . . . and dedicated to America's War Effort . . . and to the continued selling of War Savings Bonds and Stamps. See at first hand, in complete and life-like detail, how our fighting men will spend Christmas Eve throughout the world's battle-areas. Many of our boys will be on the firing line—many in fox-holes in the South Pacific . . . many in battered Sicilian villages . . . others may be afloat in life-rafts on the North Atlantic . . . still others in Japanese concentration camps. You'll see all this . . . and more . . . when you view The Hecht Co.'s War Bond Windows . . . open for public view tomorrow, Friday morning.

SEE . . "Christmas Eve on the North Atlantic"—A thrilling rescue of American fighting men, adrift in a life raft on the North Atlantic.

SEE . . "Christmas Eve in a Quonset Hut at Kiska"—How our boys in the Aleutians will celebrate the Christmas Eve of 1943 . . . in the ice and snow at Kiska.

SEE . . "Christmas Eve in a Battered Sicilian Village" — A bomb-wrecked church is the scene of an evening's prayer, conducted by a U. S. Army Chaplain.

SEE . . "Christmas Eve From the Top of the World"—A full-relief sculpture of the top of the globe . . . with American fighting men in action on every front.

SEE . . "Christmas Eve in a Jap Concentration Camp"—A group of courageous American airmen, held prisoners behind barbed-wire in a detention camp somewhere in Japan.

SEE . . "Christmas Eve in a South Pacific Fox-Hole"—Even in the jungle-swamps the boys take time out for a prayer and a thought of home on Christmas Eve.

SEE . . "Christmas Eve at a North African Air Base"—The Christmas mail comes through on a transport plane for the soldiers, sailors and paratroopers in Africa.

"CHRISTMAS EVE WITH AMERICAS' FIGHTING FORCES"

ON THE FAR FLUNG BATTLEFRONTS OF THE WORLD

WASHINGTON

Mr. Charles B. Dulcan, Sr.
Vice President and General Manager
The Hecht Company,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Dulcan:

Your Christmas War Bond Windows, dramatizing as they do the way our fighting men will be spending their Christmas this year, are a most unusual and valuable contribution not only to the people of Washington, but to all America.

These three-dimensional window displays cannot help but bring home to all who view them the true spirit of Christmas, 1943—a spirit of understanding and communion with our boys; a desire to share their Christmas here on the home front.

From my own personal observation in the actual battle zones, I can attest to the accuracy of the heart-stirring scenes you portray.

It is my hope that just as The Hecht Company helped lead the way with its inspiring presentation of the "Four Freedoms" display which later swept the Nation, so this Christmas War Bond display will serve as a model to retailers all across the land. For I believe, with you, that the best possible expression of the will to share this Christmas with our boys lies in buying and giving the one gift which will most surely and speedily bring those boys home—War Bonds.

Sincerely yours,

Henry Morgenthau Jr.
